McGovern To Lead 'People's Campaign'

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Democratic presidential nominee George McGovern, vowing to lead a people's campaign, urged wildly cheering Democrats today to put behind "our fury and our frustrations" and unite to capture the White House from President Nixon.

And the South Dakota senator appealed for help "from every Democrat and every Republican and independent who wants America to be the great and good land it can be."

It was nearly 3 a.m. when the beaming McGovern, introduced by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and joined by vice presidential nominee Thomas F. Eagleton and defeated presidential rivals, stepped to the rostrum of a tumultuous, jammed Convention Hall to accept his party's nomination.

The victorious nominee had only a few hours to rest up after his triumph — appearances before a unity breakfast for the party's House and Sente Campaign committees and a Democratic fund-raising group were scheduled before he returned to Washington later today.

McGovern also had to decide on a new chairman for the Democratic National Committee, which holds a morning organizational meeting. While he has pressed Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien to stay on, informed sources said he would ask Jean Westwood, the Utah national committeewoman, to take the job if O'Brien declines.

In the final moments of the convention that his supporters dominated all week, the triumph belonged to the onetime college professor from South Dakota.

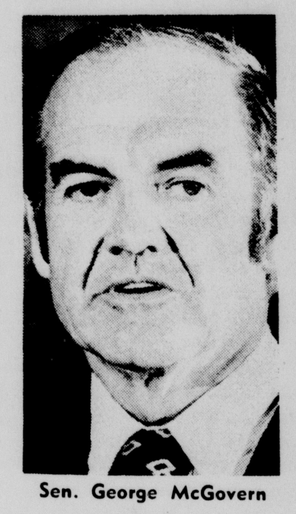

Waves of applause rocked the hall as Hubert H. Humphrey, Edmund S. Muskie, Henry M. Jackson, Shirley Chisholm and Terry Sanford lifted high the hands of the 49-year-old nominee and his 42-year-old running mate from Missouri.

Reviewing the way his campaign swept aside the established political leadership, McGovern said he would dedicate his White House campaign to the people, declared that next January he would restore government to their hands and added:

"American politics will never be the same again."

With some labor leaders still determined to sit out the campaign and other delegates grumbling about the ways in which his operatives dominated the convention, McGovern forecast the battle against Richard Nixon would bring the party "together in common cause" this fall.

Even delegates who supported the absent Gov. George C. Wallace joined the ovation when McGovern vowed to wage a national campaign and said, "We are not conceding a single state to Richard Nixon."

Cline Declines Debate

C. F. Cline of Sikeston, Democratic candidate for state representative from the new 159th district, today refused a challenge from Rep. Tony Heckemeyer, also of Sikeston, for a debate on election issues next Saturday morning.

Cline said he had firm commitments which he could not break and, with only 25 days left until the Aug. 8 primary election, he did not feel he could afford to take the time away from his campaign.

The challenge from Heckemeyer came at a meeting of Scott County Young Democrats Thursday night at Sikeston Country Club. From 150 to 200 people attended the meeting to listen to campaign speeches from nearly every Scott County candidate.

Today Heckemeyer said: "He knows what he is able to do and what he is not able to do. He is obviously not able to debate issues that he does not understand, problems he has no solutions for and has a very shallow understanding of. He can't afford to expose to the public view his real capabilities to do the job of state representative. I understand this and now I am sure most of the informed voters understand also. And of course he can't afford to expose his qualifications to close scrutiny."

Candidates present included Heckemeyer and Cline; Ed Faulkenberry of House Springs, candidate for 10 District representative to Congress; Pete Malone of Sikeston, candidate for Richard Township committeeman; Coroner Gene Nunnelee and

'Should Help Party Ticket'

Eagleton To Play Healing Role In State

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — With the nomination of Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton for the vice presidency as balm for the wounds of a deeply divided delegation during much of the past week, Missouri's Democrats left for home today hopeful Eagleton can keep the statehouse in their party's hands in November.

Eagleton, whose switch to support presidential nomenee George McGovern last Tuesday caused the greatest rift in the delegation while it was here, was in the ironic position today of being the biggest healing factor.

Members of the delegation from Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, who never publicly gave any endorsement to McGovern, to strong supporters of the South Dakota senator agreed the addition of Eagleton to the ticket should help the party's state ticket immensely in Novemqer.

"I think Missouri will rally behind Tom Eagleton and he will certainly strengthen our ticket in Missouri," said Lee McKee of Joplin, a strong supporter of Sen. Henry Jackson. "This is one of the finest political honors the state of Missouri has had since Harry Truman."

In spite of Hearnes' differences during the week with Eagleton and Sen. Stuart Symington over giving McGovern support in his successful California delegate fight, Hearnes put aside his feelings.

"I'll always help Tom any way I can," Hearnes said. "I'm not unhappy about anything."

As if there had not been enough division during the week in the McGovern-Jackson split of the Missouri delegation, a decision by McGovern aides to have a University of Missouri coed deliver one of Eagleton's seconding speech instead of Hearnes after Eagleton had extended an invitation to Hearnes was nearly the last straw.

Hearnes acknowledged some Missouri delegates were angered by the decision, but said he didn't regard it as a snub. Hearnes said he felt the McGovern people had a right to decide how to orchestrate their own show.

"I know some of them are mad," said Hearnes, "but they shouldn't be. I'm not mad at anybody, and I want to convey that impression."

Nonetheless, several delegates said they felt it unfortunate that McGovern didn't allow Hearnes to take the rostrum to second Eagleton's vice presidential nomination as a means of healing the Missouri wounds.

Ed Filipine, Eagleton's administrative assistant, went out of his way to explain to Hearnes that it was no fault of Eagleton that Hearnes' invitation to address the convention had to be withdrawn.

He said the McGovern people wanted to have two representatives and a young person to second Eagleton's nomination, and the lineup of speakers had to be set two days earlier.

Debbie Barber, 20, of Columbia, spoke for Eagleton, saying, "I believe in Tom Eagleton, and I think I speak for hundreds of thousands of Democrats throughout missouri. Sen. McGovern has made the best possible choice."

Eagleton took special note of Hearnes in his acceptance speech early today, saying, "Had he not won Missouri ... in 1968, and had I not clung to his coattails, I would not be here tonight."

Thomas F. Eagleton

Morris Pleased With Eagleton Nomination

Lt. Gov. Bill Morris is "just tickled to death" with the nomination of Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton of Missouri as the Democratic candidate for Vice- President. He is less than tickled with the presidential nominee, Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota.

Morris spoke at an interview this morning at Sikeston Memorial Airport.

Morris said he is a friend of Eagleton, although he often disagrees with him.

Eagleton will help the state ticket, Morris said, and will help the national ticket in the state.

Morris said he believes Missourians have doubts about McGovern's stands on such issues as amnesty, marijuana and abortion.

"As a man, I can support him," Morris said of McGovern, but then added that McGovern will have to clarify his past stands to reassure Missouri voters.

Morris said people capable of working should be forced off the welfare roles as soon as jobs are available. For those who need help, something should be done, he said.

His program is separated by a wide gulf from McGovern's call for the government to give $1,000 a year to every person in the country.

Morris said he didn't think Gov. Warren E. Hearnes felt badly about Thursday night's snub by the McGovern forces when they refused to allow him to second the nomination of Eagleton. He pointed out that Hearnes said McGovern had the right to choose the people for nominating speeches.

Morris had little comment on the proposal to move Troop E headquarters of the highway patrol away from Poplar Bluff. Sikeston is fighting hard to bring the headquarters to the city. Mayor Frank Ferrell arrived at the airport this morning armed with clippings from the Daily Standard to help present the city's case to Morris.

Morris said he believes the decision of whether or not to move the headquarters will be made before Hearnes leaves office and is therefore of little concern to him.

Not Left Holding Bag

Hearnes Could Wind Up In U.S. Senate

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, who seemed to be left holding the bag, could just possibly wind up in the U.S. Senate.

The Missouri governor is due to retire in January after 22 years of holding public office. His eclipse seemed more than ever certain when he came out early for Sen. Edmund Muskie and his favorite faltered along the presidential primary trail.

When Muskie stopped campaigning, Hearnes did everything he could to keep a personal hold on Missouri's 73 votes in the Democratic National Convention for bargaining purposes. His closest allies kept saying they would never vote for Sen. George McGovern. Hearnes manged to deny all but 24½ of Missouri's votes to the South Dakota senator.

But now McGovern has chosen Sen. Thomas Eagleton, a long-time political teammate of Hearnes, as his candidate for vice president.

If McGovern and Eagleton should win in November, it could touch off this power play in Missouri:

Eagleton could resign from the Senate and Hearnes could resign as governor around the first of the year. Lt. Gov. William S. Morris of Kansas City, who was elected with the blessing of Hearnes and is running for governor this year, would step up to the job immediately. He could then appoint Hearnes to the Senate.

Hearnes will be 49 on July 24. He was elected to the Missouri Legislature in 1950 and served as secretary of state before becoming the first Missouri governor ever elected for two successive four-year terms.

Hearnes carried Missouri by 381,000 votes when he was reelected governor in 1968. Eagleton won by 36,870. President Nixon beat Sen. Hubert Humphrey by 20,488.

Tax rates for the city were set at $2.10 per $100 assessed valuation. Breakdown of that figure is: library fund, 20 cents; general fund, 75 cents; and bond sinking, $1.15.

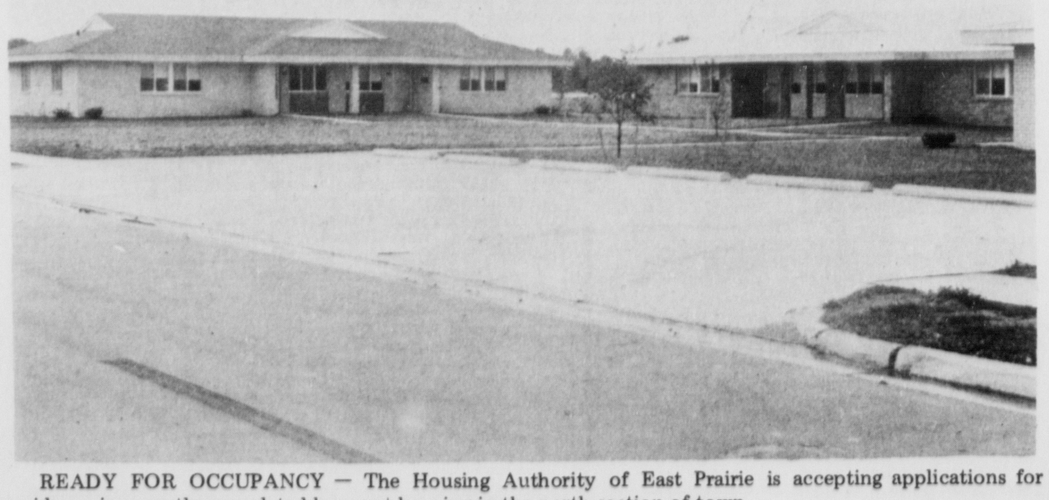

Applicants Approved

EAST PRAIRIE -- Fifteen applications for new low-rent housing have been approved, and the first tenants will be moving into designated units Monday.

The 72 rental units, located in the north section of the city south of Highway 105 bypass, were constructed by Kencraft, Inc., of Topeka, Kan. The project was accepted this week by the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the local housing authority, subject to minor deficiencies which are to be corrected.

Some landscaping, grading and minor work remains to be done, but this will not interfere with occupancy of the units, which range from one-bedroom apartments to four-bedroom homes.

Applications are being taken from 9 a.m. until noon Monday through Friday at the housing authority office on North Lincoln.

READY FOR OCCUPANCY — The Housing Authority of East Prairie is accepting applications for residence in recently completed low-rent housing in the north section of town.

PACIFISM AND NONVIOLENCE

Pacifists hold that all violence is morally wrong, even if violence could be used to protect others. "Better Red than dead," is the accompanying slogan for this frame of mind. Nothing is worth fighting for, say the pacifists. Tyranny and massacre are preferable to violence.

Most would be surprised to find that their twisting of the nonviolent doctrine is counter to that preached by the apostle of nonviolence, Mahatma Gandhi.

Gandhi said: "He who cannot protect himself or his nearest and dearest of their honor by nonviolently facing death may and ought to do so by violently dealing with the oppressor. He who can do neither of the two is a burden. He has no business to be the head of a family. He must either hide himself, or must rest content to live forever in helplessness and be prepared to crawl like a worm at the bidding of a bully."

Here we have the foremost philosopher of nonviolence telling us that there are indeed reasons for using violence. Protecting one's family, friends and the weak is not a misuse of force. It is an honorable use of it. Protecting the defenseless from bullies is the obligation of all humanitarians.

Only a pacifist is willing to let the weak be oppressed in the name of humanity. As Gandhi said, he is "prepared to crawl like a worm at the bidding of a bully."

At our discussion at the coffee table this morning the question of sin was brought up. The question of the killing of people by drunken drivers in automobile accidents plus the hundreds of thousands that are injured. I expressed the opinion and I believe that Missouri ought to have a lottery like some of the other states do. I also believe that it might be a good idea for the legislature to entitle prostitution and make it legal. I don't know, nobody around the coffee table seemed to agree with me, but they didn't disagree with me. Maybe I'll live long enough yet to see those two things happen, since there seems to be quite a bit of thunder raised about raising taxes and it looks like it doesn't make any difference what we do we are going to have more taxes, but I am going to vote for the man for Governor who is against raising the taxes, Senator Blackwell.

Missouri, progressive or backward, which do you want? Taxes higher or higher paid income, which do you want? Figure out for yourself. Investigate. Start with this. Nevada, legalized gambling. Montana, state voter approval of legalized gambling; New York, New Hampshire, Massachusetts with state lotteries. How many American dollars every year go to Ireland, via sweepstakes? Study the past for thousands of years, gambling, drinking and prostitution has existed so it no longer is a question of what is right or wrong but only whether legal or illegal. Why should Missouri remain backward? Why can't Missouri at least legalize the State Lottery and keep Missouri money in Missouri.

RETROACTIVE
ST. SWITHIN'S DAY

St. Swithin's Day if thou dost rain
For 40 days it will remain;
St. Swithin's Day if thou be fair
For 40 days 'twill rain na mair.

St. Swithin, a 9th century English bishop, was buried, at his request, not within his church but outside in "a vile and unworthy place." His relics were removed a century later to the new cathedral at Winchester where he had become patron saint. According to legend, it rained for 40 days thereafter as a sign of the saint's displeasure. Moreover, a 40-day downpour is supposed to occur whenever rain falls on the anniversary -- July 15 -- of that first St. Swithin's Day.

This year it seemed as if St. Swithin's curse was retroactive. June was a month of gloom and almost incessant rain in many parts of the world. For the first time in this century Manchester, England, reached the summer solstice (June 21) without having experienced a day of 70 degrees or warmer. The cause of this unseasonable cold spell, the Manchester Guardian reported (July 1, 1972), was icebergs drifting far south into the Atlantic. On the other side of the Atlantic, Washington did not pass the 90-degree mark until July 3 -- the latest date for any year since 1886.

Torrential rains and flash floods recently have plagued numerous areas. In Hong Kong, the heaviest downpour in 83 years triggered a series of landslides that killed at least 100 people. An earthen dam gave way in Isleton, Calif., forcing the evacuation of 1,400 residents. On June 10, an all-night downpour demolished part of Rapid City, S.D., and claimed more than 200 lives. Less than two weeks later, Tropical Storm Agnes hit the East Coast, leaving a trail of death and destruction in its wake. The Johnstown Flood of 1889 killed more people -- over 2,000 -- but never in the nation's history has flood damage been so widespread.

By the time Agnes finally blew out to sea, five states -- Florida, Maryland, New York, Pennsylvania and Virginia -- had been declared disaster areas and damage estimates ran into the billions. According to federal weather experts, the storm dumped enough rain on the East Coast to fill a lake the size of the District of Columbia (67 sq. mi.) to a depth of 2,000 feet. India could have used some of that water. Monsoon rains arrived in some areas of that country later than at any other time since 1900.

"BUT WHAT CAN I DO ABOUT IT?"

All thoughtful Americans are desperately worried at what is happening to our country — young people burning buildings, mob rule to force often unreasonable demands, racketeers stealing millions by extortion, unspeakable creatures wrecking lives of young people by selling drugs, the bribing of politicians, young men afraid to fight for their country — to say nothing of workmen who won't work, wasteful government, pornography pampered by the courts.

Everywhere people are asking, "What can I do about it?"

For one thing, tell your Senators and Congressmen what you want changed and then vote only for those you are sure will make those changes.

If you run a business do your utmost to hire and train the unemployed.

Have the courage to expose the racketeers and extortionists.

Get to know your local judges, councilmen, committeemen.

Serve on the jury when you're called.

Be a friend to young people by being active in Big Brothers, Little League, Boy and Girl Scouts.

Work with Salvation Army, Red Cross, United Appeal — in other words, be an active good cicizen.

This is our country at stake, and there is a great deal we can do about it.

PILLAGING THE POOR

Whenever we are reading about the federal grants and funds being allocated to numerous projects in the "war on poverty," we get that nagging feeling about whether these funds reach the poor people who need it.

To add to these disturbing thoughts, columnist Victor Riesel reports out of Washington, D.C., that an investigator with whom he has been digging for months into the vast "poverty" pork barrel was stunned when he heard some Congressmen are asking for an additional billion dollars to finance "the struggle."

Riesel quotes the investigator: "If we stop the wholesale thievery, the looting, the fraud, the ineficiency and the money dispensers' disinterestedness, we could save the government and the states twice that each year."

It is estimated that about $2 billion a year is wasted or stolen in the hundred - faceted fight on poverty.

As for the big money, there is the $3.3 billion (fiscal 1971) program to employ disadvantaged persons in the Federal government. Riesel writes, "Tragedy here is that no one really knows how much of this money is well spent on the well deserving, the truly hungry, crippled, illiterate and helpless in the hard-core ghettos..."

There just doesn't seem to be any viable eligibility control system. General Accounting Office (GAO) reports much of this is due to the U. S. Civil Service Commission policy which prevents investigation of family size and income of the applicant's claim for disadvantaged status. Demand for such information would be an unwarranted invasion of privacy, the Commission ruled. Yet $3.3 billion depends on such information for the annual program.

The GAO soon will probe the program. There has been no overall survey, so the GAO will see what this nation, and the truly poor, are getting for the billions being spent. Are they becoming less or more dependent? Is the money going to the helpless who generally get shunted aside by the slippery? So far, no one knows.

As we see it, from what we read and hear, the poor aren't stealing it. Who is?

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the problems of a mother is that on rainy days she has to think up something for the children to do to prevent them from going stir crazy.

One of the troubles with being a grownup is that when you feel you are going stir crazy on a rainy day your mother usually isn't around to tell you what to do.

And despite the opinion of self-centered youth to the contrary, it rains just as often when you are older as when you are young. Probably oftener, for some rain manages to fall every day.

So, if it should be raining wherever you are today and your imagination fails you, here are a few things you might consider doing just to pass the time until your weather is better:

Try to remember the names of the Bobbsey Twins, the Rover Boys and the Three Musketeers.

Go through your wallet and throw away the old losing lottery tickets and expired credit cards.

See how long your congressman will listen to you if you ring him on a collect call.

Pretend you live in Philadelphia, and that every day in your life is pretty much like this.

Trim a corn. If you don't have corns, ask a neighbor's wife if you can trim one of hers.

Read a copy of a recent Boy Scout handbook and see how much knots have changed since you used to tie them.

Bait a mousetrap. Now, lie down and see if you can steal the bait without using your hands or getting your nose caught.

Go into the office of the boss and offer to help him improve his putting game. i

Form a private club banning all members of any sect, sex, race, creed or color whatsoever.

Utter an oath, mutter a malediction, or murmur a malevolence.

Curse the Red Baron.

Change your will and disinherit everybody.

Write a memo to God.

If you can't think of anything else to do on a rainy day, go out and get wet in it and enjoy it. Rainy days aren't sent just to punish you, but to test your ingenuity.

A man has to earn his own sunshine, too.

FARMERS AND THE FOOD PRICES

There is considerable controversy over rising food prices, all from those who do not produce the food at the farm level.

Some want to put a ceiling on the prices a farmer can get for his products.

That would be fine — if the ceiling was high enough.

Right now it isn't.

Farmers are paying almost 100% more in production costs than 20 years ago.

They are paying 260% more in real estate taxes.

They are encumbered with 400% more debt.

In those 20 years prices farmers receive for their products have gone up but 6%.

Today, the average consumer spends $1,223 annually for food, with the farmer getting only $447, a dollar less than 20 years ago when the average spent per person was $896, and the farmer got $448.

Until the farmer can get a larger share of the consumer dollar, it would be disastrous for agriculture to control prices at the farm source and not roll back the total costs and the costs of his operation.

CONSUMERS FAVOR
FREE MARKET

Scores of legislative proposals at state and federal levels come before lawmakers year after year to curb or outlaw promotion or advertising in one form or another. Currently, according to a roundup of sales promotion legislative activity in the publication "Advertising and Sales Promotion" some 30 states have had under consideration bills of a punitive nature directed toward the promotional rights of merchants in such matters as the use of trading stamps.

The fact that this police=state type legislation almost invariably goes down to defeat may possibly be due to the sheer weight of public opinion. The public apparently holds no brief for attempts to curb this aspect of the free market. A recent survey by the nation's largest trading stamp company reveals that only 7 per cent of consumers across the nation "favor government action to eliminate trading stamps." The study showed it was based on a cross-section of the nation's consumers. It showed, for example, that 79 per cent of all U. S. households save trading stamps — about 80 per cent of the women and 70 per cent of the men. A heavy favorable response to trading stamps was discerned at all income, age and educational levels.

In spite of the mania for consumer protection and for the regulation or outlawing of many of the customary methods of doing business, the U. S. public, obviously, favors our American free market system. It wants no part of the controls, scarcities and lack of choice that prevail in nations where the state thinks it is a better judge of what's good for the consumer than the consumer himself exercising his individual judgement in a free market.

20% HIKE
ISN'T JUSTIFIED

It now appears that the Senate and House at Washington will authorize a 20% hike in Social Security payments, Chiefly, it is suspicioned, to try to get votes this fall from the older people.

It is neither realistic nor justified, in our opinion.

We're old enough, and are drawing Social Security, and like most other people, don't object to receiving it and won't refuse to take the money if the measure is approved.

However, next year congress is sure to pass a bill that will hike the payments into Social Security that both employees and employers are paying.

Business and those working for business owners are already saddled with two much expense in the form of taxes of various sorts. The passage of the proposed 20% hike will eventually work a hardship on both.

Originally the House proposed a 5% increase. This is more realistic and appropriate, takes care of the increased cost of living for those on Social Security, and should be sufficient, at least for the present.

That extra 15% is nothing but a vote- getting gimmick, and if passed, we'll guess it will do so with the approval of both Democrats and Republicans, and that neither party will get any particular advantage vote-wise.

LEAVE US ALONE

In this year of selections, we are best with politicians. They throw themselve at us. They come in all sizes; large, medium, and small; in many shapes: heroic, oblong, pear-shaped. They speak with Harvard accents, the voice of Vassar, midwestern twangs, and the piney woods of East Texas.

But they all have one thing in common: they want to give us something. We, according to these politicians, just for existing, are entitled to all the wonders of life. If we are alive, we deserve the very best.

One politician offers us a guaranteed annual income for doing nothing. Another offers free child-care centers. Still another will give us the world if we will only take it.

Can this be America, the land of the free, the home of the brave? What would Thomas Jefferson think if he could see these politicians? What would George Washington and Doublas MacArthur think?

A free man wants nothing from the government but protection from criminals. He wants to be left alone to develop his skills and to pursue his own destiny. He wants to own a business free from government dictatorship. He wants to freely choose his own job and he wants to buy a home in accordance with mutual agreement with the seller.

The politicians and bureaucrats control much of our daily lives today. But they want more. They want to give us more and more and control us more and more.

We must pursue our own lives and destinies. We must tell the politicians to leave us alone. HLH

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

MIAMI BEACH — While the Democrats have declared their unrelenting opposition to organized crime, they have been boozing, bathing and babeing at Miami Beach hostelries linked to the Mafia.

The Republicans, operating out of the same hotels next month, are expected to take an equally strong stand against the underworld, despite records tying their hosts to organized crime.

Two Justice Department strike forces, meanwhile, are investigating Maifa chieftains who have investigated in Miami Beach's glittering hotels and other enterprises.

One unit works directly out of Miami on organized crime. The other, the mysterious Strike Force 18, operates out of Washington. Its racketbusters include not only Mafia experts but tax and securities specialists who are investigating highly complex securities crimes, real estate frauds and corporate swindling.

Our sources on the strike forces say every Mafia "family" has representatives in the Miami area. They are attracted here largely by the narcotics trade. The federal crackdown on the traditional Marseilles-New York smuggling route has caused the Mafia drug traffickers to open new routes through the Caribbean. Miami is now the main control point.

It's no secret that crime lords and their reputed associates have a penchant for the luxury hotel business. Records show, for example, that the fabulous Eden Roc and Deauville are partly owned by Sam Cohen and Morris Lansburgh who are awaiting trial in organized crime case.

The government charges that the two famous innkeepers plotted with Mafia hoodlum Meyer Lansky to skim $14 million from the gambling take of a Las Vegas casino.

These criminal charges, however, haven't stopped the Democrats from using both the Deauville and Eden Roc as convention centers. The TV fund-raising spectacular was held at the Deauville, The Youth and women's caucuses were scheduled there -- although the women's event was cancelled. Wilbur Mills and Shirley Chisholm set up their presidential headquarters there. And the convention issued press credentials out of the Eden Roc.

Both Democratic and Republican leaders should have known about mob influence in the beach hotels. The Miami Herald exposed the infiltration as far back as 1967. Florida state authorities moved in 1969 to throw out the management of 19 hotels on grounds they were "directly or indirectly connected with .....criminal societies...and are Mafia controlled."

Yet my associate Les Whitten found the same management in at least 10 of the accused hotels. Spokesmen for each hotel denied any mob ties.

Sam Cohen and Morris Lansburgh refused all comment. But both have previously denied the criminal charges against them. Their offices acknowledged that Cohen is owner of the Deauville and part owner of the Eden Roc. Lansburgh operates the Deauville and Saxony, is part owner of the Eden Roc and Versailles.

John Tweedle, part owner of the Hawaiian Isle and the beach hostelries, conceded that ex-bootlegeer Yiddie Bloom had a first mortgage on the Hawaiian Isle. "I got the hotel from Bloom and his associates, and they retained a mortgage on it," explained Tweedle. But he insisted that the Minneapolis crime figure has no voice in its management.

The dazzling Aztec Motel and its sister hotel, the Kimberly, were identified by Florida authorities as crime-connected. Meyer Lansky's brother Jake is known to be a stockholder.

Bernie Bercuson, an executive of the Aztec-Kimberly complex, said Lansky has no control over the hotels. Bercuson also happens to be an executive of the famous Singapore Motel where the old gambling master himself, Meyer Lansky, held court before he skipped the country.

A former state rackets investigator, Charles Kimball, estimated for us that at least 40 Miami Beach hotels have varying degrees of mob influence. And the two strike forces have gathered evidence that the mobster-businessmen use strong-arm tactics and illegal methods in their business dealings.

Footnote: Among the Democrats staying at mob-linked hotels are the Nevada delegation, Eden Roc; Florida delegation, Deauville; Colorado and Hawaii delegations, Versailles; Iowa and Wisconsin delegations, Saxony; Montana delegation, Aztec.

DEMOCRATIC DOINGS

Busing Story -- A Mississippi delegate came to Charles Evers, the Mississipp black leader, with a $1,700 offer from the McGovern forces to pay the bus fare of his poor but proud delegation, Evers told us. "We've been begging peanuts all these years," Evers advised the delegates, "and we aren't beholden to anyone -- not to George Mc Govern, Hubert Humphrey or Shirley Chisholm, either. We'll pay our own way." McGovern aides denied that the national organization had offered Evers any money. They said the offer, if it was made, must have come from overzealous local McGovern supporters.

GOP Infiltrators -- Two top Republicans infiltrated the Democratic convention. They were GOP Vice Chairman Dick Herman and his top assistant, Jim Gale. We discovered them posing as service personnel. They explained they had come to inspect the security arrangements in preparation for their own convention in August.

Humphrey Spurned --- Four years ago, the victorious Hubert Humphrey refused to meet with the hippies, yippies and zippies during the Chicago convention. But, at this year's Miami Beach convention, the long-haired crowd refused to meet with Humphrey. Miami Beach's tall, dignified Mayor Chuck Hall, who got along well himself with the wild bunch, urged Humphrey to sit down with them. Humphrey's aides opposed the idea, but the happy warrior agreed. The wild ones, however, wouldn't talk with Humphrey.

Democratic Finances -- The Democrats didn't raise enough money from their TV spectacular to pay off the debts left over from 1968. The party is now so broke, it may not be able to afford to type up the voluminous platform hearings.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Word from Nixon: White House in constant touch with labor chiefs at democratic convention

MIAMI — Politically speaking, candidate Richard Nixon got down here one convention early. He had his own command post in the White House Oval Room, his own listening posts in labor's camp at the Hotel Americana, his own advance men in the Democratic Convention headquarters at the Hotel Fontainbleau. And such shrewd political aides as operations chief Charles (Chuck) Colson ran a hot line between his desk in the Executive Office Building in Washington and labor leaders' suites in plush Bal Harbour.

A few hours before the formal opening of the Democratic conclave here, President Nixon made his first move. It became known that he would no longer push for the passage of the Crippling Strikes Prevention Act -- for which he has fought for almost three years. All Cabinet officers and speechwriters were told to get off the kick. The Administration would no longer fight for a law which would curb transportation strikes and which the perpetually angry AFL—CIO Chief George Meany had denounced as a compulsory arbitration proposal depriving giant unions of the right to strike.

With one stroke, with one message, the President wiped out considerable resentment -- and at the exact moment when Meany personally was directing the final assault on George McGovern.

There was other happy talk between the White House and such labor chiefs as Longshoremen's president Teddy Gleason. At about 5 p.m. Monday, Colson reported to the bantam pier leaders the value in jobs and the shot in the arm the sale of $750 million worth of wheat to the Soviets would mean to the labor federation Maritime Trades Dept.

At about the same time Meany's men were loading some 700 copies of the AFL-CIO's special white paper attack on McGovern into cars for the run to the convention hall. These abrasive documents had been months in the making. The AFL—CIO researchers had done an FBI-CIA -Dun & Bradstreet investigation of the candidate. They had gone not only into his foreign policy but into his personal financial affairs, the background of his money raisers and his friendship with businessmen and grain ranchers.

When McGovern was briefed on the labor probe of his private life, family and homes, he lost some of his cultured cool. Word of McGovern's anger had been relayed back to the labor camp which had operated in a tightly closed conference room with a back door through which the union chiefs, most of the national AFL-CIO vice presidents, slipped almost unnoticed for a series of 10 a.m. strategy sessions on how to smash McGovern.

It was from that post that Meany and his political specialists kept inclose touch with George Wallace's suite in a fortress -like hotel across the bay. The hot-line between labor and Gov. Wallace was strung through the rooms of the Alabaman's campaign manager, Charles S. Snider. Thus they arranged the final futile early morning hours "crush McGovern" strategems.

Thus those of us down on the convention floor witnessed the strange alliance of labor and Wallace delegates (AFL—CIO Ohio president Frank King and Florida's Wallace delegate, Norman Bie) in a late-hour parliamentary duel with chairman Larry O'Brien.

There was and is sharp dissension inside labor. It is generally reported that "only" the influential Jerry Wurf, leader of the sky-rocketing Municipal Employes Union (which has a goal of 13 million Federal and city, county and state employes in one federation) is for McGovern. Not true. There are many other influential leaders of unions which can contribute heavily who will fight to convince Meany that "the enemy is Nixon."

Meany is playing it cool -- so cool that the day of the convention opening he went out to the golf links. He may yet agree to a perfunctory endorsement of McGovern' though at the moment he's saying he'd sooner back Mao.

Thus two mighty cool men will be high noon-ing. McGovern knows he needs Meany's help as the middle of the roader with the strongest clout in any drive to keep the saddened Hubert Humphrey forces, the old-line labor movement, the Wallace legions and all the others all together.

Meany knows that failure to endorse the Democratic party would split his movement and his high council, which already is laden with men working directly and indirectly with the Committee for the Reelection of the President (Nixon.) Meany knows campaigns come and go. But his executive council will be there for the duration. So he, too, must consider endorsing McGovern.

This is where Dick Nixon's political skill, as a candidate, swung into play. Mr. Nixon already has with him such strong men as top building and construction union general presidents, leaders of the Maritime Department, and New Yorkers who are close to Gov. Nelson Rockefeller.

As a candidate, Dick Nixon let it be known that he is not vendetta-minded. And though he already has strong labor support inside the AFL-CIO, and outside too, in the Teamsters' Frank Fitzsimmons, the President indicated there's still a lit candle in the White House window for George Meany -- which George McGovern might stuff out after the job they did, or tried to do, on him here.

Missouri, progressive or backward, which do you want? Taxes higher or higher paid income, which do you want? Figure out for yourself. Investigate. Start with this. Nevada, legalized gambling. Montana, state voter approval of legalized gambling; New York, New Hampshire, Massachusetts with state lotteries. How many American dollars every year go to Ireland, via sweepstakes? Study the past for thousands of years, gambling, drinking and prostitution has existed so it no longer is a question of what is right or wrong but only whether legal or illegal. Why should Missouri remain backward? Why can't Missouri at least legalize the State Lottery and keep Missouri money in Missouri.

RETROACTIVE
ST. SWITHIN'S DAY

St. Swithin's Day if thou dost rain
For 40 days it will remain;
St. Swithin's Day if thou be fair
For 40 days 'twill rain na mair.

St. Swithin, a 9th century English bishop, was buried, at his request, not within his church but outside in "a vile and unworthy place." His relics were removed a century later to the new cathedral at Winchester where he had become patron saint. According to legend, it rained for 40 days thereafter as a sign of the saint's displeasure. Moreover, a 40-day downpour is supposed to occur whenever rain falls on the anniversary -- July 15 -- of that first St. Swithin's Day.

This year it seemed as if St. Swithin's curse was retroactive. June was a month of gloom and almost incessant rain in many parts of the world. For the first time in this century Manchester, England, reached the summer solstice (June 21) without having experienced a day of 70 degrees or warmer. The cause of this unseasonable cold spell, the Manchester Guardian reported (July 1, 1972), was icebergs drifting far south into the Atlantic. On the other side of the Atlantic, Washington did not pass the 90-degree mark until July 3 -- the latest date for any year since 1886.

Torrential rains and flash floods recently have plagued numerous areas. In Hong Kong, the heaviest downpour in 83 years triggered a series of landslides that killed at least 100 people. An earthen dam gave way in Isleton, Calif., forcing the evacuation of 1,400 residents. On June 10, an all-night downpour demolished part of Rapid City, S.D., and claimed more than 200 lives. Less than two weeks later, Tropical Storm Agnes hit the East Coast, leaving a trail of death and destruction in its wake. The Johnstown Flood of 1889 killed more people -- over 2,000 -- but never in the nation's history has flood damage been so widespread.

By the time Agnes finally blew out to sea, five states -- Florida, Maryland, New York, Pennsylvania and Virginia -- had been declared disaster areas and damage estimates ran into the billions. According to federal weather experts, the storm dumped enough rain on the East Coast to fill a lake the size of the District of Columbia (67 sq. mi.) to a depth of 2,000 feet. India could have used some of that water. Monsoon rains arrived in some areas of that country later than at any other time since 1900.

"BUT WHAT CAN I DO ABOUT IT?"

All thoughtful Americans are desperately worried at what is happening to our country — young people burning buildings, mob rule to force often unreasonable demands, racketeers stealing millions by extortion, unspeakable creatures wrecking lives of young people by selling drugs, the bribing of politicians, young men afraid to fight for their country — to say nothing of workmen who won't work, wasteful government, pornography pampered by the courts.

Everywhere people are asking, "What can I do about it?"

For one thing, tell your Senators and Congressmen what you want changed and then vote only for those you are sure will make those changes.

If you run a business do your utmost to hire and train the unemployed.

Have the courage to expose the racketeers and extortionists.

Get to know your local judges, councilmen, committeemen.

Serve on the jury when you're called.

Be a friend to young people by being active in Big Brothers, Little League, Boy and Girl Scouts.

Work with Salvation Army, Red Cross, United Appeal — in other words, be an active good citizen.

This is our country at stake, and there is a great deal we can do about it.

PILLAGING THE POOR

Whenever we are reading about the federal grants and funds being allocated to numerous projects in the "war on poverty," we get that nagging feeling about whether these funds reach the poor people who need it.

To add to these disturbing thoughts, columnist Victor Riesel reports out of Washington, D.C., that an investigator with whom he has been digging for months into the vast "poverty" pork barrel was stunned when he heard some Congressmen are asking for an additional billion dollars to finance "the struggle."

Riesel quotes the investigator: "If we stop the wholesale thievery, the looting, the fraud, the ineficiency and the money dispensers' disinterestedness, we could save the government and the states twice that each year."

It is estimated that about $2 billion a year is wasted or stolen in the hundred - faceted fight on poverty.

As for the big money, there is the $3.3 billion (fiscal 1971) program to employ disadvantaged persons in the Federal government. Riesel writes, "Tragedy here is that no one really knows how much of this money is well spent on the well deserving, the truly hungry, crippled, illiterate and helpless in the hard-core ghettos..."

There just doesn't seem to be any viable eligibility control system. General Accounting Office (GAO) reports much of this is due to the U. S. Civil Service Commission policy which prevents investigation of family size and income of the applicant's claim for disadvantaged status. Demand for such information would be an unwarranted invasion of privacy, the Commission ruled. Yet $3.3 billion depends on such information for the annual program.

The GAO soon will probe the program. There has been no overall survey, so the GAO will see what this nation, and the truly poor, are getting for the billions being spent. Are they becoming less or more dependent? Is the money going to the helpless who generally get shunted aside by the slippery? So far, no one knows.

As we see it, from what we read and hear, the poor aren't stealing it. Who is?

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the problems of a mother is that on rainy days she has to think up something for the children to do to prevent them from going stir crazy.

One of the troubles with being a grownup is that when you feel you are going stir crazy on a rainy day your mother usually isn't around to tell you what to do.

And despite the opinion of self-centered youth to the contrary, it rains just as often when you are older as when you are young. Probably oftener, for some rain manages to fall every day.

So, if it should be raining wherever you are today and your imagination fails you, here are a few things you might consider doing just to pass the time until your weather is better:

Try to remember the names of the Bobbsey Twins, the Rover Boys and the Three Musketeers.

Go through your wallet and throw away the old losing lottery tickets and expired credit cards.

See how long your congressman will listen to you if you ring him on a collect call.

Pretend you live in Philadelphia, and that every day in your life is pretty much like this.

Trim a corn. If you don't have corns, ask a neighbor's wife if you can trim one of hers.

Read a copy of a recent Boy Scout handbook and see how much knots have changed since you used to tie them.

Bait a mousetrap. Now, lie down and see if you can steal the bait without using your hands or getting your nose caught.

Go into the office of the boss and offer to help him improve his putting game. i

Form a private club banning all members of any sect, sex, race, creed or color whatsoever.

Utter an oath, mutter a malediction, or murmur a malevolence.

Curse the Red Baron.

Change your will and disinherit everybody.

Write a memo to God.

If you can't think of anything else to do on a rainy day, go out and get wet in it and enjoy it. Rainy days aren't sent just to punish you, but to test your ingenuity.

A man has to earn his own sunshine, too.

FARMERS AND THE FOOD PRICES

There is considerable controversy over rising food prices, all from those who do not produce the food at the farm level.

Some want to put a ceiling on the prices a farmer can get for his products.

That would be fine — if the ceiling was high enough.

Right now it isn't.

Farmers are paying almost 100% more in production costs than 20 years ago.

They are paying 260% more in real estate taxes.

They are encumbered with 400% more debt.

In those 20 years prices farmers receive for their products have gone up but 6%.

Today, the average consumer spends $1,223 annually for food, with the farmer getting only $447, a dollar less than 20 years ago when the average spent per person was $896, and the farmer got $448.

Until the farmer can get a larger share of the consumer dollar, it would be disastrous for agriculture to control prices at the farm source and not roll back the total costs and the costs of his operation.

CONSUMERS FAVOR
FREE MARKET

Scores of legislative proposals at state and federal levels come before lawmakers year after year to curb or outlaw promotion or advertising in one form or another. Currently, according to a roundup of sales promotion legislative activity in the publication "Advertising and Sales Promotion" some 30 states have had under consideration bills of a punitive nature directed toward the promotional rights of merchants in such matters as the use of trading stamps.

The fact that this police=state type legislation almost invariably goes down to defeat may possibly be due to the sheer weight of public opinion. The public apparently holds no brief for attempts to curb this aspect of the free market. A recent survey by the nation's largest trading stamp company reveals that only 7 per cent of consumers across the nation "favor government action to eliminate trading stamps." The study showed it was based on a cross-section of the nation's consumers. It showed, for example, that 79 per cent of all U. S. households save trading stamps — about 80 per cent of the women and 70 per cent of the men. A heavy favorable response to trading stamps was discerned at all income, age and educational levels.

In spite of the mania for consumer protection and for the regulation or outlawing of many of the customary methods of doing business, the U. S. public, obviously, favors our American free market system. It wants no part of the controls, scarcities and lack of choice that prevail in nations where the state thinks it is a better judge of what's good for the consumer than the consumer himself exercising his individual judgement in a free market.

20% HIKE
ISN'T JUSTIFIED

It now appears that the Senate and House at Washington will authorize a 20% hike in Social Security payments, Chiefly, it is suspicioned, to try to get votes this fall from the older people.

It is neither realistic nor justified, in our opinion.

We're old enough, and are drawing Social Security, and like most other people, don't object to receiving it and won't refuse to take the money if the measure is approved.

However, next year congress is sure to pass a bill that will hike the payments into Social Security that both employees and employers are paying.

Business and those working for business owners are already saddled with two much expense in the form of taxes of various sorts. The passage of the proposed 20% hike will eventually work a hardship on both.

Originally the House proposed a 5% increase. This is more realistic and appropriate, takes care of the increased cost of living for those on Social Security, and should be sufficient, at least for the present.

That extra 15% is nothing but a vote- getting gimmick, and if passed, we'll guess it will do so with the approval of both Democrats and Republicans, and that neither party will get any particular advantage vote-wise.

LEAVE US ALONE

In this year of selections, we are best with politicians. They throw themselve at us. They come in all sizes; large, medium, and small; in many shapes: heroic, oblong, pear-shaped. They speak with Harvard accents, the voice of Vassar, midwestern twangs, and the piney woods of East Texas.

But they all have one thing in common: they want to give us something. We, according to these politicians, just for existing, are entitled to all the wonders of life. If we are alive, we deserve the very best.

One politician offers us a guaranteed annual income for doing nothing. Another offers free child-care centers. Still another will give us the world if we will only take it.

Can this be America, the land of the free, the home of the brave? What would Thomas Jefferson think if he could see these politicians? What would George Washington and Doublas MacArthur think?

A free man wants nothing from the government but protection from criminals. He wants to be left alone to develop his skills and to pursue his own destiny. He wants to own a business free from government dictatorship. He wants to freely choose his own job and he wants to buy a home in accordance with mutual agreement with the seller.

The politicians and bureaucrats control much of our daily lives today. But they want more. They want to give us more and more and control us more and more.

We must pursue our own lives and destinies. We must tell the politicians to leave us alone. HLH

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

MIAMI BEACH — While the Democrats have declared their unrelenting opposition to organized crime, they have been boozing, bathing and babeing at Miami Beach hostelries linked to the Mafia.

The Republicans, operating out of the same hotels next month, are expected to take an equally strong stand against the underworld, despite records tying their hosts to organized crime.

Two Justice Department strike forces, meanwhile, are investigating Maifa chieftains who have investigated in Miami Beach's glittering hotels and other enterprises.

One unit works directly out of Miami on organized crime. The other, the mysterious Strike Force 18, operates out of Washington. Its racketbusters include not only Mafia experts but tax and securities specialists who are investigating highly complex securities crimes, real estate frauds and corporate swindling.

Our sources on the strike forces say every Mafia "family" has representatives in the Miami area. They are attracted here largely by the narcotics trade. The federal crackdown on the traditional Marseilles-New York smuggling route has caused the Mafia drug traffickers to open new routes through the Caribbean. Miami is now the main control point.

It's no secret that crime lords and their reputed associates have a penchant for the luxury hotel business. Records show, for example, that the fabulous Eden Roc and Deauville are partly owned by Sam Cohen and Morris Lansburgh who are awaiting trial in organized crime case.

The government charges that the two famous innkeepers plotted with Mafia hoodlum Meyer Lansky to skim $14 million from the gambling take of a Las Vegas casino.

These criminal charges, however, haven't stopped the Democrats from using both the Deauville and Eden Roc as convention centers. The TV fund-raising spectacular was held at the Deauville, The Youth and women's caucuses were scheduled there -- although the women's event was cancelled. Wilbur Mills and Shirley Chisholm set up their presidential headquarters there. And the convention issued press credentials out of the Eden Roc.

Both Democratic and Republican leaders should have known about mob influence in the beach hotels. The Miami Herald exposed the infiltration as far back as 1967. Florida state authorities moved in 1969 to throw out the management of 19 hotels on grounds they were "directly or indirectly connected with .....criminal societies...and are Mafia controlled."

Yet my associate Les Whitten found the same management in at least 10 of the accused hotels. Spokesmen for each hotel denied any mob ties.

Sam Cohen and Morris Lansburgh refused all comment. But both have previously denied the criminal charges against them. Their offices acknowledged that Cohen is owner of the Deauville and part owner of the Eden Roc. Lansburgh operates the Deauville and Saxony, is part owner of the Eden Roc and Versailles.

John Tweedle, part owner of the Hawaiian Isle and the beach hostelries, conceded that ex-bootlegeer Yiddie Bloom had a first mortgage on the Hawaiian Isle. "I got the hotel from Bloom and his associates, and they retained a mortgage on it," explained Tweedle. But he insisted that the Minneapolis crime figure has no voice in its management.

The dazzling Aztec Motel and its sister hotel, the Kimberly, were identified by Florida authorities as crime-connected. Meyer Lansky's brother Jake is known to be a stockholder.

Bernie Bercuson, an executive of the Aztec-Kimberly complex, said Lansky has no control over the hotels. Bercuson also happens to be an executive of the famous Singapore Motel where the old gambling master himself, Meyer Lansky, held court before he skipped the country.

A former state rackets investigator, Charles Kimball, estimated for us that at least 40 Miami Beach hotels have varying degrees of mob influence. And the two strike forces have gathered evidence that the mobster-businessmen use strong-arm tactics and illegal methods in their business dealings.

Footnote: Among the Democrats staying at mob-linked hotels are the Nevada delegation, Eden Roc; Florida delegation, Deauville; Colorado and Hawaii delegations, Versailles; Iowa and Wisconsin delegations, Saxony; Montana delegation, Aztec.

DEMOCRATIC DOINGS

Busing Story -- A Mississippi delegate came to Charles Evers, the Mississipp black leader, with a $1,700 offer from the McGovern forces to pay the bus fare of his poor but proud delegation, Evers told us. "We've been begging peanuts all these years," Evers advised the delegates, "and we aren't beholden to anyone -- not to George Mc Govern, Hubert Humphrey or Shirley Chisholm, either. We'll pay our own way." McGovern aides denied that the national organization had offered Evers any money. They said the offer, if it was made, must have come from overzealous local McGovern supporters.

GOP Infiltrators -- Two top Republicans infiltrated the Democratic convention. They were GOP Vice Chairman Dick Herman and his top assistant, Jim Gale. We discovered them posing as service personnel. They explained they had come to inspect the security arrangements in preparation for their own convention in August.

Humphrey Spurned --- Four years ago, the victorious Hubert Humphrey refused to meet with the hippies, yippies and zippies during the Chicago convention. But, at this year's Miami Beach convention, the long-haired crowd refused to meet with Humphrey. Miami Beach's tall, dignified Mayor Chuck Hall, who got along well himself with the wild bunch, urged Humphrey to sit down with them. Humphrey's aides opposed the idea, but the happy warrior agreed. The wild ones, however, wouldn't talk with Humphrey.

Democratic Finances -- The Democrats didn't raise enough money from their TV spectacular to pay off the debts left over from 1968. The party is now so broke, it may not be able to afford to type up the voluminous platform hearings.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Word from Nixon: White House in constant touch with labor chiefs at democratic convention

MIAMI — Politically speaking, candidate Richard Nixon got down here one convention early. He had his own command post in the White House Oval Room, his own listening posts in labor's camp at the Hotel Americana, his own advance men in the Democratic Convention headquarters at the Hotel Fontainbleau. And such shrewd political aides as operations chief Charles (Chuck) Colson ran a hot line between his desk in the Executive Office Building in Washington and labor leaders' suites in plush Bal Harbour.

A few hours before the formal opening of the Democratic conclave here, President Nixon made his first move. It became known that he would no longer push for the passage of the Crippling Strikes Prevention Act -- for which he has fought for almost three years. All Cabinet officers and speechwriters were told to get off the kick. The Administration would no longer fight for a law which would curb transportation strikes and which the perpetually angry AFL—CIO Chief George Meany had denounced as a compulsory arbitration proposal depriving giant unions of the right to strike.

With one stroke, with one message, the President wiped out considerable resentment -- and at the exact moment when Meany personally was directing the final assault on George McGovern.

There was other happy talk between the White House and such labor chiefs as Longshoremen's president Teddy Gleason. At about 5 p.m. Monday, Colson reported to the bantam pier leaders the value in jobs and the shot in the arm the sale of $750 million worth of wheat to the Soviets would mean to the labor federation Maritime Trades Dept.

At about the same time Meany's men were loading some 700 copies of the AFL-CIO's special white paper attack on McGovern into cars for the run to the convention hall. These abrasive documents had been months in the making. The AFL—CIO researchers had done an FBI-CIA -Dun & Bradstreet investigation of the candidate. They had gone not only into his foreign policy but into his personal financial affairs, the background of his money raisers and his friendship with businessmen and grain ranchers.

When McGovern was briefed on the labor probe of his private life, family and homes, he lost some of his cultured cool. Word of McGovern's anger had been relayed back to the labor camp which had operated in a tightly closed conference room with a back door through which the union chiefs, most of the national AFL-CIO vice presidents, slipped almost unnoticed for a series of 10 a.m. strategy sessions on how to smash McGovern.

It was from that post that Meany and his political specialists kept inclose touch with George Wallace's suite in a fortress -like hotel across the bay. The hot-line between labor and Gov. Wallace was strung through the rooms of the Alabaman's campaign manager, Charles S. Snider. Thus they arranged the final futile early morning hours "crush McGovern" strategems.

Thus those of us down on the convention floor witnessed the strange alliance of labor and Wallace delegates (AFL—CIO Ohio president Frank King and Florida's Wallace delegate, Norman Bie) in a late-hour parliamentary duel with chairman Larry O'Brien.

There was and is sharp dissension inside labor. It is generally reported that "only" the influential Jerry Wurf, leader of the sky-rocketing Municipal Employes Union (which has a goal of 13 million Federal and city, county and state employes in one federation) is for McGovern. Not true. There are many other influential leaders of unions which can contribute heavily who will fight to convince Meany that "the enemy is Nixon."

Meany is playing it cool -- so cool that the day of the convention opening he went out to the golf links. He may yet agree to a perfunctory endorsement of McGovern' though at the moment he's saying he'd sooner back Mao.

Thus two mighty cool men will be high noon-ing. McGovern knows he needs Meany's help as the middle of the roader with the strongest clout in any drive to keep the saddened Hubert Humphrey forces, the old-line labor movement, the Wallace legions and all the others all together.

Meany knows that failure to endorse the Democratic party would split his movement and his high council, which already is laden with men working directly and indirectly with the Committee for the Reelection of the President (Nixon.) Meany knows campaigns come and go. But his executive council will be there for the duration. So he, too, must consider endorsing McGovern.

This is where Dick Nixon's political skill, as a candidate, swung into play. Mr. Nixon already has with him such strong men as top building and construction union general presidents, leaders of the Maritime Department, and New Yorkers who are close to Gov. Nelson Rockefeller.

As a candidate, Dick Nixon let it be known that he is not vendetta-minded. And though he already has strong labor support inside the AFL-CIO, and outside too, in the Teamsters' Frank Fitzsimmons,the President indicated there's still a lit candle in the White House window for George Meany -- which George McGovern might stuff out after the job they did, or tried to do, on him here.

Tom Eagleton Day Proclaimed By Morris

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri's acting governor, Lt. Gov. William S. Morris, declared today as Tom Eagleton Day in honor of the state's junior senator nomination Thursday night as the Democratic vice presidential candidate.

ACTING GOVERNOR William S. (Bill) Morris flew into Sikeston today to campaign for governor in the Aug. 8 Democratic Primary election. One stop on his Sikeston campaign tour was Homestead Distributing Company where he spoke with manager Ellis Atchison. Morris, acting as governor while Gov. Warren E. Hearnes attends the Democratic National Convention in Miami Beach, has proclaimed today Tom Eagleton Day in honor of the vice presidential nominee.

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes was in Miami Beach serving as chairman of Missouri's Democratic delegation.

Both Hearnes and Eagleton were early supporters of Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine for president. When Muskie pulled out, Hearnes switched to Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington as Eagleton threw his support to George McGovern.

Hearnes, who said McGovern was "not in tune with Missouri," was asked by Eagleton to give one of his seconding speeches.

However, after a meeting with McGovern, Eagleton said the McGovern people had other plans and apologized to Hearnes.

Hearnes said he was not "unhappy" about the snub and said the McGovern staffers wanted "a girl, a black and a Chicano" to give the nominating speeches.

The girl was Debbee Barber, 20, St. Louis. A junior at the University of Missouri at Columbia, she was an alternate delegate.

Morris, a Democratic candidate for governor, said in his proclamation Eagleton "will bring tothe national campaign a contribution of both youthful political energy and a deep personal dedication to public se vice."

Justice Receives Reprimand

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — "I'm just relieved it's all over," Supreme Court Judge John E. Bardgett said Thursday after his colleagues voted unanimously to reprimand him as recommended by a special disciplinary commission.

"I'm glad it's over," Bardgett said. "That's all I care to say."

Bardgett, 45, said he still plans to run for retention on the court in the general election. He was appointed to the high court by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes in 1970.

The new Commission on Retirement, Removal and Discipline of the Judiciary found that Bardgett, by socializing with House Speaker James E. Godfrey, D-St. Louis, in a Jeffersin City cocktail lounge last Feb. 29 while a case involving Godfrey was pending before the high court, gave "the appearance of impropriety."

The commission exonerated Bardgett on charges that he acted with impropriety or that he was intoxicated and cursed Rep. John W. Webb, R-Webb City.

Webb called the commission's recommendation a farce.

Burris On Drug Program

BERNIE — Betty Hayden of Caruthersville, Carl Davis of Senath and Tom Burris of Bernie, members of the Bootheel Task Force on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse, will appear on the KFVS-TV Public Affairs Forum to be shown Sunday, at 9:30 p.m., and on July 22, at 1:30 p.m.

The program will include the showing of the film "Time of Decision" and a discussion on alcoholism led by the Task Force members.

The Task Force on Alcoholism was established several months ago by the Comprehensive Health Council of the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission. Its purpose is to study the problems of alcoholism in the Bootheel and to submit an application for a $50,000 grant from the National Institute of Mental Health.

This grant, if received, would be used to excess the extent of need for the establishment of a comprehensive community alcoholism treatment; to catalog the existing programs for providing service to alcoholics in the Bootheel; to develop a program to meet existing needs, including the co-ordination of existing programs; and to establish an area-wide council on alcoholism to assure community involvement and adequate local financing of the development program.

The Task force meets monthly, usually at the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission office in Malden. The next meeting will be held Aug. 15 at the community building in Risco.

Improvements Made At Training School

BOONVILLE, Mo. (AP) — Since a legislative subcommittee toured the Missouri Training School for Boys last summer, there have been "some marked improvements in several areas," Rep. E. J. "Lucky" Cantrell, D-Overland, said Thursday.

Cantrell, chairman of the Missouri House Appropriations Committee, said the primary changes have come in "the curtailment of the jump squads" — groups of boys who stole money, candy and cigarettes from other youths — and in the kitchen and dining room areas.

However, Cantrell said, "we're not entirely happy at this point." There was lack of visible progress in three areas which led Cantrell to view efforts by Walter S. DeClue, MTS superintendent, with "mixed emotions."

The areas mentioned by the appropriations chairman:

—"Communications between the administration and the staff have not been that improved. Although we didn't experience the real tension — with all the scrambling among them — as we did last year — there still is a lack of communication involved.

—"The administration has not made the extended effort at community relations in the Boonville area as they ought to do. There are no voluntary contributions or efforts by the people of Boonville . . . The administration could quiet the fears there with a good community relations program.

—"There are yet no meaningful work programs, which was another of our suggestions. Something like that would give the guys some incentive, something more than menial- type jobs, to recognize their accomplishments. I didn't recognize any movement in that direction."

Cantrell toured the facility Wednesday. An appropriations subcommittee, headed by Rep. John Blassie, D-St. Louis, remained in the area Thursday to continue touring MTS buildings and meet with the state Board of Training Schools.

"The food facilities were very impressive compared to what it was when we started working up there," Cantrell said. "They removed all the student help in the kitchen and replaced it with adults.

Tom Eagleton Day Proclaimed By Morris

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri's acting governor, Lt. Gov. William S. Morris, declared today as Tom Eagleton Day in honor of the state's junior senator nomination Thursday night as the Democratic vice presidential candidate.

ACTING GOVERNOR William S. (Bill) Morris flew into Sikeston today to campaign for governor in the Aug. 8 Democratic Primary election. One stop on his Sikeston campaign tour was Homestead Distributing Company where he spoke with manager Ellis Atchison. Morris, acting as governor while Gov. Warren E. Hearnes attends the Democratic National Convention in Miami Beach, has proclaimed today Tom Eagleton Day in honor of the vice presidential nominee.

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes was in Miami Beach serving as chairman of Missouri's Democratic delegation.

Both Hearnes and Eagleton were early supporters of Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine for president. When Muskie pulled out, Hearnes switched to Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington as Eagleton threw his support to George McGovern.

Hearnes, who said McGovern was "not in tune with Missouri," was asked by Eagleton to give one of his seconding speeches.

However, after a meeting with McGovern, Eagleton said the McGovern people had other plans and apologized to Hearnes.

Hearnes said he was not "unhappy" about the snub and said the McGovern staffers wanted "a girl, a black and a Chicano" to give the nominating speeches.

The girl was Debbee Barber, 20, St. Louis. A junior at the University of Missouri at Columbia, she was an alternate delegate.

Morris, a Democratic candidate for governor, said in his proclamation Eagleton "will bring tothe national campaign a contribution of both youthful political energy and a deep personal dedication to public se vice."

Health Fund Tax Rate Reduced

CHARLESTON — Mississippi County Health Department has notified Mississippi County Court that the health fund tax rate will be reduced to six cents per $100 evaluation for 1972.

The rate has been eight cents per $100 since 1969, when it was reduced from 10 cents due to an increase in property evaluation.

EAST PRAIRIE — Two were arrested by the police department Thursday.

A. C. Mills of East Prairie was fined $10 in City Court this morning for drinking in public, and Rodger D. Scott of East Prairie forfeited $50 bond posted for careless and imprudent driving.

CHARLESTON — Robert Buchanan of Sikeston was approved for the position of assistant high school principal Wednesday night by the R-1 board of education.

Other teachers contracted include Martha Pierceall and Elizabeth Barkley for special education; Marilyn Henderhan for Hearnes Elementary School; Henry Champion for high school social studies; and Deidre Ellis for speech correction.

Resignation's were accepted from the following teachers: Donna Farishon, Larry White, Linda Henson, John Wade and Janice Wichern.

Justice Receives Reprimand

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — "I'm just relieved it's all over," Supreme Court Judge John E. Bardgett said Thursday after his colleagues voted unanimously to reprimand him as recommended by a special disciplinary commission.

"I'm glad it's over," Bardgett said. "That's all I care to say."

Bardgett, 45, said he still plans to run for retention on the court in the general election. He was appointed to the high court by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes in 1970.

The new Commission on Retirement, Removal and Discipline of the Judiciary found that Bardgett, by socializing with House Speaker James E. Godfrey, D-St. Louis, in a Jeffersin City cocktail lounge last Feb. 29 while a case involving Godfrey was pending before the high court, gave "the appearance of impropriety."

The commission exonerated Bardgett on charges that he acted with impropriety or that he was intoxicated and cursed Rep. John W. Webb, R-Webb City.

Webb called the commission's recommendation a farce.

Burris On Drug Program

BERNIE — Betty Hayden of Caruthersville, Carl Davis of Senath and Tom Burris of Bernie, members of the Bootheel Task Force on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse, will appear on the KFVS-TV Public Affairs Forum to be shown Sunday, at 9:30 p.m., and on July 22, at 1:30 p.m.

The program will include the showing of the film "Time of Decision" and a discussion on alcoholism led by the Task Force members.

The Task Force on Alcoholism was established several months ago by the Comprehensive Health Council of the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission. Its purpose is to study the problems of alcoholism in the Bootheel and to submit an application for a $50,000 grant from the National Institute of Mental Health.

This grant, if received, would be used to excess the extent of need for the establishment of a comprehensive community alcoholism treatment; to catalog the existing programs for providing service to alcoholics in the Bootheel; to develop a program to meet existing needs, including the co-ordination of existing programs; and to establish an area-wide council on alcoholism to assure community involvement and adequate local financing of the development program.

The Task force meets monthly, usually at the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission office in Malden. The next meeting will be held Aug. 15 at the community building in Risco.

Improvements Made At Training School

BOONVILLE, Mo. (AP) — Since a legislative subcommittee toured the Missouri Training School for Boys last summer, there have been "some marked improvements in several areas," Rep. E. J. "Lucky" Cantrell, D-Overland, said Thursday.

Cantrell, chairman of the Missouri House Appropriations Committee, said the primary changes have come in "the curtailment of the jump squads" — groups of boys who stole money, candy and cigarettes from other youths — and in the kitchen and dining room areas.

However, Cantrell said, "we're not entirely happy at this point." There was lack of visible progress in three areas which led Cantrell to view efforts by Walter S. DeClue, MTS superintendent, with "mixed emotions."

The areas mentioned by the appropriations chairman:

—"Communications between the administration and the staff have not been that improved. Although we didn't experience the real tension — with all the scrambling among them — as we did last year — there still is a lack of communication involved.

—"The administration has not made the extended effort at community relations in the Boonville area as they ought to do. There are no voluntary contributions or efforts by the people of Boonville . . . The administration could quiet the fears there with a good community relations program.

—"There are yet no meaningful work programs, which was another of our suggestions. Something like that would give the guys some incentive, something more than menial- type jobs, to recognize their accomplishments. I didn't recognize any movement in that direction."

Cantrell toured the facility Wednesday. An appropriations subcommittee, headed by Rep. John Blassie, D-St. Louis, remained in the area Thursday to continue touring MTS buildings and meet with the state Board of Training Schools.

"The food facilities were very impressive compared to what it was when we started working up there," Cantrell said. "They removed all the student help in the kitchen and replaced it with adults.

Writer Admits He Thinks Like A Child

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Children's book author Meindert DeJong, who once thought he never would write for children, concedes he now will never write for adults.

"Every time I contemplate an adult novel, a children's book gets in the way," he said.

At the same time, he admits he lacks all the qualifications of being a juvenile writer.

"I never knew many children, never had any children and never read any children's books," he says.

Meindert, who came to the United States from The Netherlands when he was seven, spoke at Aquinas College recently, He received a bachelor's degree in English many years ago from Calvin College in Grand Rapids.

Ann Landers
Young Mother Can't Keep Names Straight

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing this letter because I can't sleep. I'm leaving home tomorrow and will probably be gone a long time. Suddenly I realized what home means to me and what it means to have a mother. In spite of the hard time she has given me (and those I have given myself) I know that one day Mom will not be here. Until tonight I never stopped to consider that possibility.

I hope every kid out there who will be leaving home soon, whether it's college, a job, the Service, or just to split -- will let your mother know before you go what she means to you.

By the time this appears in the paper (if it does) I will have hit the road to get my head together. If I had not written this letter my mother would like to think that I did, so I'll buzz off without signing it. A few thousand other mothers would like to think their son or daughter wrote it, too. So call me -- Love And Peace.

P.S. I used to read your Column and snicker because I was sure those letters were phony. Here's one Ann Landers didn't make up.

Dear Love and Peace: If you see this in the paper -- whereever you are --please drop a line and let me know if you got your head together and how you're making it.

Dear Ann Landers: I know you are busy with serious problems but mine is beginning to get to me. It's my mother. She's a wonderful person and everyone loves her, but she can't get a name straight. When the kids come over (the same kids she's been seeing for years), she calls them by the wrong names. Arthur is "Arnold," Larry is "Lennie" and Vernon is "Bernie." Then she calls me by my sister's name even though she is looking straight at me.

Mom is 45, too young to be senile. The kids never say anything but it's embarrassing. Any suggestions? -- Redfaced In Redlands

Dear Red: Wait 'til you're 45 and let's see how well your do. In the meantime, make light of it when she calls Arthur "Arnold." Say, "Mom, Arnold just left -- this is Arthur."

Dear Ann Landers: The vacation season is here again. Nearly half of America will be packing up to go someplace this month and next. After twenty-years of operating a beach resort I've decided we are rapidly becoming a nation of slobs.

I refer specifically to people who go into small shops to buy gifts and souvenirs. Usually they arrive in droves just as the sun goes down, or when it begins to rain. This creates a bottleneck because people don't use common sense. Here are some simple rules to help ease, if not eliminate, some problems:

1. Have your money ready. Don't wait to be served and then start digging around in the bottom of your handbag. You know you're going to have to pay for the merchandise eventually.

2. Decide what you want before you ask the salesperson to help you. Most items are on display for this purpose.

3. Return merchandise to the proper bin, hook or shelf.

4. Reading material is taped to the outside for a reason. Don't break open packaged articles.

5. Don't jam the aisles while socializing.

6. Report dirty bathrooms to the management.

We'd like to enjoy your vacation, too. Please help us. --- Kure Beach, N.C.

Dear Beach: Thanks for the Sure Kure. I hope it works.

Even it drinking is the "in" thing in your crowd, it needn't crowd you out. Learn the facts from Ann Landers' booklet, "Booze and You --- For Teen-Agers Only." Send 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to this newspaper with your request.

China Women Build Country

TOKYO (AP) — Women's equality was recognized in mainland China long before the U.S. Senate on March 22 completed approval of an amendment to the American Constitution giving women equal rights.

The amendment will take effect in the United States two years after ratification by the minimum requirement of 38 states. But China's 1954 constitution stipulates that women "enjoy equal rights with men in all spheres of political, economic, cultural, social and family life."

What the Chinese constitution says are not mere words.

On the eve of his departure from China, President Richard Nixon was reported to have asked Chinese Premier Chou En-Lai if he could pose a delicate question.

"Are men or women more intelligent?"

Chou replied that "In arts and handicrafts, I think women do better." And he quickly added: "In the majority of work now, what men can do, women do as well."

Chou did not agree that in the home women always are more intelligent. He cited as an example a woman interpreter working with the U.S. Presidential party who had so many duties that her husband was responsible for managing their home.

Old habits and traditions die hard in the Chinese countryside, but any man who holds his wife under his thumb now is a violator of Chinese Communist Party Chairman Mao Tse-Tung's thought, which rules supreme in the People's Republic.

Mao wrote in 1927 that a man in China was usually dominated by the three systems of political authority, clan authority and religious authority. "As for women," he said, "in addition to being dominated by these three systems of authority, they are also being dominated by men — the authority of the husband."

He said the four authorities faced by Chinese women were "the embodiment of the whole feudal-patriarchal ideology and system, and . . . the four thick ropes, binding the Chinese people, particularly the peasants."

Communist revolutionaries, Mao decreed, are for the overthrow of the feudal-patriarchal ideology and system not only in the countryside but in the whole country as well.

Pitfalls And Profits Of Auction Buying

NEW YORK (AP) — It takes more effort than going into a store with an open checkbook, but buying at auction can be exciting, profitable, fun and rarely disappointing if you know what you're doing, says Michael De Forrest, for whom auctions have become a way of life.

"It's the kind of shopping that makes certain demands on the buyer," he explains. "You have to investigate, be responsible for looking at the lots ahead of time, know what you're getting. You can't depend on the auctioneer's spiel or on your friends — you've got to trust your own observation."

Preparation is the difference between success and failure for auction-goers, says De Forrest, who has written a book, "How to Buy at Auction," that details the why, where and how of buying at such sales.

"Bidding is simple — you just hold your hand up. What you do before you bid is what matters," insists the author. "You must go and examine the lots before you go to the auction. Once something's knocked down to you it's yours.

"The auctioneer is going to want to see your money up close, so you have every right to see his things up close," he adds. "Most auctions have a preview, but if you don't have ample inspection privileges I think you should have full return privileges."

He suggests taking a pen and steno pad to pre-auction exhibits, in order to list lot numbers with comments, observations and descriptions of anything that will help you determine your bid. It is also handy to carry a measuring tape, to make sure furniture will fit the place you have in mind for it; a magnet, to test whether an object is bronze or iron; and a magnifying glass, to help see such details as signatures and hallmarks.

"Then you decide on the basis of your inspection and on the basis of your own needs what price you are willing to pay," De Forrest continues. "If you have 11 of something and see No. 12 coming up at an auction it would be worth much more to you than to me.

"We all exceed our predetermined limits at times," the author concedes. "If you go one bid or so over the maximum you've set it's not too bad. The dangerous situation is where you get locked in on the price and say 'I must have it'; then you really get hurt.

"You learn to avoid this after awhile," he goes on. "If you find you've overpaid for something you may become suspicious of the whole auction scene and quit, or you begin to bid with caution and responsibility."

De Forrest, a freelance writer, got into the auction scene entirely by chance in 1965 when he learned that furniture from the New York World's Fair was being sold.

"We had a big empty house and were tired of the orange crate bit," he recalls. "We wanted to get real furniture but we didn't have any real money. My wife, Betty, and I went to the auction and bought a sofa and two great pairs of drapes that we paid five bucks for and that are still hanging in our living room. Then we went to a car auction and then got involved with antiques and that really did it."

Now he attends as many as three auctions a week and the couple have furnished their entire house that way. But De Forrest says the chances of making a "killing" are slim. He also warns there are unscrupulous auctioneers who will squeeze an extra bid out of a buyer and "enough dishonesty to make everyone be on their guard but not enough to be hurt too terribly if you keep your wits about you."

Writer Admits He Thinks Like A Child

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Children's book author Meindert DeJong, who once thought he never would write for children, concedes he now will never write for adults.

"Every time I contemplate an adult novel, a children's book gets in the way," he said.

At the same time, he admits he lacks all the qualifications of being a juvenile writer.

"I never knew many children, never had any children and never read any children's books," he says.

Meindert, who came to the United States from The Netherlands when he was seven, spoke at Aquinas College recently, He received a bachelor's degree in English many years ago from Calvin College in Grand Rapids.

Ann Landers
Young Mother Can't Keep Names Straight

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing this letter because I can't sleep. I'm leaving home tomorrow and will probably be gone a long time. Suddenly I realized what home means to me and what it means to have a mother. In spite of the hard time she has given me (and those I have given myself) I know that one day Mom will not be here. Until tonight I never stopped to consider that possibility.

I hope every kid out there who will be leaving home soon, whether it's college, a job, the Service, or just to split -- will let your mother know before you go what she means to you.

By the time this appears in the paper (if it does) I will have hit the road to get my head together. If I had not written this letter my mother would like to think that I did, so I'll buzz off without signing it. A few thousand other mothers would like to think their son or daughter wrote it, too. So call me -- Love And Peace.

P.S. I used to read your Column and snicker because I was sure those letters were phony. Here's one Ann Landers didn't make up.

Dear Love and Peace: If you see this in the paper -- whereever you are --please drop a line and let me know if you got your head together and how you're making it.

Dear Ann Landers: I know you are busy with serious problems but mine is beginning to get to me. It's my mother. She's a wonderful person and everyone loves her, but she can't get a name straight. When the kids come over (the same kids she's been seeing for years), she calls them by the wrong names. Arthur is "Arnold," Larry is "Lennie" and Vernon is "Bernie." Then she calls me by my sister's name even though she is looking straight at me.

Mom is 45, too young to be senile. The kids never say anything but it's embarrassing. Any suggestions? -- Redfaced In Redlands

Dear Red: Wait 'til you're 45 and let's see how well your do. In the meantime, make light of it when she calls Arthur "Arnold." Say, "Mom, Arnold just left -- this is Arthur."

Dear Ann Landers: The vacation season is here again. Nearly half of America will be packing up to go someplace this month and next. After twenty-years of operating a beach resort I've decided we are rapidly becoming a nation of slobs.

I refer specifically to people who go into small shops to buy gifts and souvenirs. Usually they arrive in droves just as the sun goes down, or when it begins to rain. This creates a bottleneck because people don't use common sense. Here are some simple rules to help ease, if not eliminate, some problems:

1. Have your money ready. Don't wait to be served and then start digging around in the bottom of your handbag. You know you're going to have to pay for the merchandise eventually.

2. Decide what you want before you ask the salesperson to help you. Most items are on display for this purpose.

3. Return merchandise to the proper bin, hook or shelf.

4. Reading material is taped to the outside for a reason. Don't break open packaged articles.

5. Don't jam the aisles while socializing.

6. Report dirty bathrooms to the management.

We'd like to enjoy your vacation, too. Please help us. --- Kure Beach, N.C.

Dear Beach: Thanks for the Sure Kure. I hope it works.

Even it drinking is the "in" thing in your crowd, it needn't crowd you out. Learn the facts from Ann Landers' booklet, "Booze and You --- For Teen-Agers Only." Send 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to this newspaper with your request.

Pitfalls And Profits Of Auction Buying

NEW YORK (AP) — It takes more effort than going into a store with an open checkbook, but buying at auction can be exciting, profitable, fun and rarely disappointing if you know what you're doing, says Michael De Forrest, for whom auctions have become a way of life.

"It's the kind of shopping that makes certain demands on the buyer," he explains. "You have to investigate, be responsible for looking at the lots ahead of time, know what you're getting. You can't depend on the auctioneer's spiel or on your friends — you've got to trust your own observation."

Preparation is the difference between success and failure for auction-goers, says De Forrest, who has written a book, "How to Buy at Auction," that details the why, where and how of buying at such sales.

"Bidding is simple — you just hold your hand up. What you do before you bid is what matters," insists the author. "You must go and examine the lots before you go to the auction. Once something's knocked down to you it's yours.

"The auctioneer is going to want to see your money up close, so you have every right to see his things up close," he adds. "Most auctions have a preview, but if you don't have ample inspection privileges I think you should have full return privileges."

He suggests taking a pen and steno pad to pre-auction exhibits, in order to list lot numbers with comments, observations and descriptions of anything that will help you determine your bid. It is also handy to carry a measuring tape, to make sure furniture will fit the place you have in mind for it; a magnet, to test whether an object is bronze or iron; and a magnifying glass, to help see such details as signatures and hallmarks.

"Then you decide on the basis of your inspection and on the basis of your own needs what price you are willing to pay," De Forrest continues. "If you have 11 of something and see No. 12 coming up at an auction it would be worth much more to you than to me.

"We all exceed our predetermined limits at times," the author concedes. "If you go one bid or so over the maximum you've set it's not too bad. The dangerous situation is where you get locked in on the price and say 'I must have it'; then you really get hurt.

"You learn to avoid this after awhile," he goes on. "If you find you've overpaid for something you may become suspicious of the whole auction scene and quit, or you begin to bid with caution and responsibility."

De Forrest, a freelance writer, got into the auction scene entirely by chance in 1965 when he learned that furniture from the New York World's Fair was being sold.

"We had a big empty house and were tired of the orange crate bit," he recalls. "We wanted to get real furniture but we didn't have any real money. My wife, Betty, and I went to the auction and bought a sofa and two great pairs of drapes that we paid five bucks for and that are still hanging in our living room. Then we went to a car auction and then got involved with antiques and that really did it."

Now he attends as many as three auctions a week and the couple have furnished their entire house that way. But De Forrest says the chances of making a "killing" are slim. He also warns there are unscrupulous auctioneers who will squeeze an extra bid out of a buyer and "enough dishonesty to make everyone be on their guard but not enough to be hurt too terribly if you keep your wits about you."

China Women Build Country

TOKYO (AP) — Women's equality was recognized in mainland China long before the U.S. Senate on March 22 completed approval of an amendment to the American Constitution giving women equal rights.

The amendment will take effect in the United States two years after ratification by the minimum requirement of 38 states. But China's 1954 constitution stipulates that women "enjoy equal rights with men in all spheres of political, economic, cultural, social and family life."

What the Chinese constitution says are not mere words.

On the eve of his departure from China, President Richard Nixon was reported to have asked Chinese Premier Chou En-Lai if he could pose a delicate question.

"Are men or women more intelligent?"

Chou replied that "In arts and handicrafts, I think women do better." And he quickly added: "In the majority of work now, what men can do, women do as well."

Chou did not agree that in the home women always are more intelligent. He cited as an example a woman interpreter working with the U.S. Presidential party who had so many duties that her husband was responsible for managing their home.

Old habits and traditions die hard in the Chinese countryside, but any man who holds his wife under his thumb now is a violator of Chinese Communist Party Chairman Mao Tse-Tung's thought, which rules supreme in the People's Republic.

Mao wrote in 1927 that a man in China was usually dominated by the three systems of political authority, clan authority and religious authority. "As for women," he said, "in addition to being dominated by these three systems of authority, they are also being dominated by men — the authority of the husband."

He said the four authorities faced by Chinese women were "the embodiment of the whole feudal-patriarchal ideology and system, and ... the four thick ropes, binding the Chinese people, particularly the peasants."

Communist revolutionaries, Mao decreed, are for the overthrow of the feudal-patriarchal ideology and system not only in the countryside but in the whole country as well.

Parents Attend Clothing Workshop

GRAY RIDGE — "Clothing for the Under Six Crowd" was the theme of the children's clothing workshop just completed at the Gray Ridge Head Start center.

The program was coordinated and conducted through the efforts of University of Missouri extension textiles and clothing specialist Jewel Grady of Bloomfield and Delta Area Head Start social aid director John Porter of Portageville. Classes have been held each Wednesday for six weeks.

The major objective of the program was to help Head Start personnel, parents and leaders working with Head Start centers in Big Ridge, North Lilbourn, Bell City, Dexter, Sikeston, Charleston, Gray Ridge, Benton and Bernie to have a better understanding of the social, psychological and physical roles that clothing plays in the life of a child.

Beginning sessions emphasized choosing clothing that help the child to grow independent, by having self-help features found on the clothing he is to wear. Other features emphasized in selecting garments for children were those allowing for rapid growth, providing safety, allowing comfort and security and helping a child gain motor skills.

Care of clothing was also stressed as an important part of children's clothing. Hints concerning laundering, removing stains and simple mending tasks were discussed.

The program was climaxed by class members having an opportunity to demonstrate some of the things they had learned.

Each center participating decided to sew a new garment for a child from a used adult garment. Such items as dresses, boxer shorts, boys' pants and jumpers were among the garments constructed. Each garment showed some of the features they had studied.

Participating in the course were Mary Agee, Marjorie Bonner and Rebecca Ziegenhorn of Sikeston, along with Dewey Marshall and Dorothy Clay of Essex.

Myra L. Ellis and Helen Diller of Gray Ridge; Cary Williams of Gideon; Catherine Hendricks, Pauline Brock and Willie Walton of Benton; and Della Wiseman, Sheila Koonce, Bonnie Burns and Linda Plotts of Dexter.

Geraldine Robinson, Mary E. Helems and Jeanne Lovins of Lilbourn; Jeanette Albright of Bernie; Lillian Ann Bankhead, Luvine Haynes, Sally Banks and Shirley Coleman of Charleston; Laverne Lovette, Annie Daniels, Delores Smith and Glenda Kelley of Big Ridge; Donna Carroll of Bell City; and James E. Ferguson and John Porter of Portageville.

Parents Should Set Limits Where Drugs Are Concerned

NEW YORK (AP) — Parents need to set values, limits, clear approval and clear disapproval of their children's actions, especially where drugs are concerned, says Dr. Mitchell S. Rosenthal, director of Phoenix House, the nation's largest system of therapeutic communities for drug addicts.

"And they must not give into peer pressure either," he adds. "It's almost as though by discovering peer pressure parents have given up their own muscle — muscle which can be emotional, financial and legal.

"We live in a time of technical experts and parents have felt the drug problem is so complex and so technical it will take drug experts to solve it. But there is no reason for parents to tolerate addiction," Rosenthal says.

To help show parents the "muscle" they can exert in preventing their children from using drugs, Rosenthal has written a book, "Drugs, Parents and Children, The Three-Way Connection." He says he felt such a book was necessary after watching the average age of residents at Phoenix House drop from 28 to 21, with many drug users even younger.

The doctor notes that parents spend too much time trying to distinguish between which drugs are more harmful than others, and which drugs their children might be using and points out that such reasoning is ineffective. "Ten years ago, if a child had come home drunk every night, his parents would have felt they had to do something about it — without caring if he was getting drunk on Scotch or on bourbon," he says.

Rosenthal also says the rising drug rate is "inseparable from the fact that people think no matter what's wrong with them, there is some chemical that will fix it." Parents can combat this attitude, he says, by not abusing drugs, including alcohol, sleeping pills or tranquilizers, in their own homes.

Pointing out that in New York much of the money available for fighting drug abuse goes to methadone maintenance programs, Rosenthal insists, "I am in no way in favor of making more drugs available. Drug use begets drug use. In a drug-oriented society, the answer you come up with for addiction is another drug. But I feel that's just buying our need for a quick answer."

Rosenthal says it's also become more "in vogue" for parents not to be demanding with their children — "to let them make whatever choices they want given enough intellectual information." This is one attitude, he says, that can lead to drug use.

"I don't think the modern parent is bad," he says, "but that he is unwittingly doing his children a disservice by taking off the demands and giving license. In childhood, a child has to learn to grow in the adult world, not have the adult world modify itself to suit the world of the child."

Other problems he points out that may lead to drug use are that the period of adolescence has been extended by lengthened schooling, making youngsters dependent and unproductive in society for a longer period; the turbulence around sexual experimentation; and the rapid biological development and growth of youth with associated awkwardness.

"Young people are caught on two polar points of wanting to be taken care of and yet move in another direction. They're hungry for approval from their peer group, but they still want approval from their parents," he says. Parents can help their children stay away from drugs, Rosenthal maintains, by staying in close touch with them, knowing their peer groups and setting down a rule of "No Drugs!"

Rosenthal is pessimistic about the increasing use of methadone. "I think we'll go the whole route with it, then discover it won't work and come back and say, 'We won't permit people to be addicts'."

Doctors Disappointment Turns Into Opportunity

BALTIMORE (AP) — Thousands of babies may owe their lives to the fact that Dr. Helen Brooke Taussig specialized in pediatrics 48 years ago and, 20 years later, helped find a cure for the fatal infant heart defect known as "blue baby."

"It was one of those times in life when what seemed to be a disappointment later proved to be a great opportunity," Dr. Taussig, a retired staff physician at Johns Hopkins Hospital, said.

Dr. Taussig, 73, was denied an internship in medicine after her graduation from the Hopkins School of Medicine because one woman from her class already had been accepted for the post.

The school would not put two women in the same field, Dr. Taussig explained, so she decided to intern in pediatrics.

She stayed in the field for a half-century and despite her official status as professor emeritus of pediatrics, still puts in eight hours nearly every day at Hopkins.

"Retirement has one meaning to me," she once told an associate. "You sink into your bed at the end of the day, exhausted, and hope that the telephone doesn't ring until morning.

"I have slowed down a bit, but if you call retirement sitting still and doing nothing, I'll never do it."

Dr. Taussig, named in March as the first woman master in the American College of Physicians, specialized in pediatric cardiology after she joined the Hopkins staff in 1924.

In 1944, she helped develop the first successful operation for "blue babies," so-called because they are born with a constricted artery connecting heart and lungs. The lack of oxygen in the blood gives the skin a bluish hue.

Dr. Taussig had read about a surgeon in Boston who had tied off a vessel leading to the lung.

"Not being a surgeon," she said, "it gave me no difficulty to ask, "If you can tie off a ductus, why can't you build a new one altogether?"

When Dr. Alfred Blalock, a surgeon, came to Hopkins, Dr. Taussig worked out the details of the operation with him. The first successful "blue baby" operation was performed nearly 30 years ago.

Though her life's work was with children, the white-haired physician never married.

"A person can't do everything she wants to in life and I've had other experiences that I wouldn't have had if I had married," Dr. Taussig said.

"Besides, I think I've been more of a success with what I've done than I would have been with marriage."

Blind Brother And Sister Unaware Of World Happenings

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (AP) — After almost 40 years of blindness — and a lifetime of silence — Louise Selby, 60, and her brother Bill, 53, no longer seem to care very much about the world known only by touch.

Alice Ann Henry

They usually sit together in the sunny living room, touching each other for companionship and communication: sometimes quietly holding hands, other times with fingers flying in conversation.

But if one moves away without telling the other, there's visible panic in the searching hands that reach out — in ever widening circles — to regain contact with the other half of their world.

Staff members at the Country House here, a home for retarded but trainable adults, say they know very little about the pair. Records indicate only names, ages, brief diagnoses of their condition and health records since they were placed there by their father six years ago. Both were born deaf mutes, and went blind about 40 years ago, officials said.

In the six year's they've been wards of the state, Louise and Bill have been oblivious to happenings outside their immediate surroundings. Wars, presidents, assassinations, even men on the moon are unknown to them — part of a world in which they seemingly have no interest.

Except for a brief schooling, the pair stayed at home and learned to take care of themselves. Bill became adept at craft work and Louise learned the needle skills of sewing, embroidery and hemstitching.

But today they seldom use those skills.

Although Louise is normally even tempered and dispositioned, she does occasionally show a big sister's pique — folding her hands in her lap and refusing to talk to Bill no matter how hard he tugs at her fingers.

But, as suddenly and inexplicably as it starts, it stops. And, she reaches out and traces her finger across his arm, as if to apologize.

Bill can communicate only through finger talk, and most of the staff and 20 other residents can get simple messages across to him. But, if it's complicated, Louise becomes the interpreter.

Since coming to Country House she's learned to read Braile and communicate through a Braile typewriter — a slow and tedious method — but a skill that opens a little bigger door to the world.

Parents Attend Clothing Workshop

GRAY RIDGE — "Clothing for the Under Six Crowd" was the theme of the children's clothing workshop just completed at the Gray Ridge Head Start center.

The program was coordinated and conducted through the efforts of University of Missouri extension textiles and clothing specialist Jewel Grady of Bloomfield and Delta Area Head Start social aid director John Porter of Portageville. Classes have been held each Wednesday for six weeks.

The major objective of the program was to help Head Start personnel, parents and leaders working with Head Start centers in Big Ridge, North Lilbourn, Bell City, Dexter, Sikeston, Charleston, Gray Ridge, Benton and Bernie to have a better understanding of the social, psychological and physical roles that clothing plays in the life of a child.

Beginning sessions emphasized choosing clothing that help the child to grow independent, by having self-help features found on the clothing he is to wear. Other features emphasized in selecting garments for children were those allowing for rapid growth, providing safety, allowing comfort and security and helping a child gain motor skills.

Care of clothing was also stressed as an important part of children's clothing. Hints concerning laundering, removing stains and simple mending tasks were discussed.

The program was climaxed by class members having an opportunity to demonstrate some of the things they had learned.

Each center participating decided to sew a new garment for a child from a used adult garment. Such items as dresses, boxer shorts, boys' pants and jumpers were among the garments constructed. Each garment showed some of the features they had studied.

Participating in the course were Mary Agee, Marjorie Bonner and Rebecca Ziegenhorn of Sikeston, along with Dewey Marshall and Dorothy Clay of Essex.

Myra L. Ellis and Helen Diller of Gray Ridge; Cary Williams of Gideon; Catherine Hendricks, Pauline Brock and Willie Walton of Benton; and Della Wiseman, Sheila Koonce, Bonnie Burns and Linda Plotts of Dexter.

Geraldine Robinson, Mary E. Helems and Jeanne Lovins of Lilbourn; Jeanette Albright of Bernie; Lillian Ann Bankhead, Luvine Haynes, Sally Banks and Shirley Coleman of Charleston; Laverne Lovette, Annie Daniels, Delores Smith and Glenda Kelley of Big Ridge; Donna Carroll of Bell City; and James E. Ferguson and John Porter of Portageville.

Bad Week In Minors

The week of July 3 through 9 was a bad one for Southeast Missouri baseball athletes playing in professional baseball's minor leagues.

Both Greg Buys and Mark Littell suffered defeat in pitching appearances and Gary Owens went through a week of inactivity.

Buys, the Kennett product, who had improved his earned run mark from a ballooned 12-plus to 5.65 through June, started July on the losing side by working one inning and yielding seven hits. His ERA jumped to 6.17. Buys plays in the Carolina league for the Yanks' Kinston club.

Gideon's Littell, starring for Waterloo, Iowa, won one and lost another in two appearances last week. The tall righthander worked 13 innings, allowing 13 hits, walking 10 and striking out 14. His ERA stands at 3.46.

Owens' figures for the season remained at six hits in 39 at bats with five runs scored, one double and one run batted in The Vanduser products average is .154.

AL Stars Named

NEW YORK (AP) — Dick Allen, Rod Carew, Brooks Robinson, Luis Aparicio, Rggie Jackson, Carl Yastrzemski, Bobby Murcer and Bill Freehan appear virtually certain to be the starting American League lineup in baseball's All-Star game in Atlanta July 25.

With only the weekend tabulating to be done before the official starting team will be announced Monday, today's weekly report from the office of commissioner Bowie Kuhn shows these eight far in front in the voting by the fans and in little danger of losing their leads.

Allen of the Chicago White Sox leads with 807,896 votes for first base. Carew, of Minnesota, has 632,255 for second base while Baltimore's Robinson has 782,272 for third base and Aparicio of Boston 491,908 for shortstop.

Freehan of Detroit leads with 583,417 for the catching spot. Jackson of Oakland has 695,516, Yastrzemski of Boston 464,431 and Murcer, of the New York Yankees, 366,189 for the outfield berths. The pitchers will be announced next week.

GEORGE WOODS shown moments after launching a 70 foot, one and three quarter inch heave of the 16-pound shot put during last week's Olympic trials at Norman, Okla. The former Sikeston High star topped the list of qualifiers and will compete in the Munich, Germany, Olympics for the United States. It will mark the second Olympic appearance for the big 300-pounder. He won a silver medal in 1968.

Braves Shutout

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Reggie Cleveland, the St. Louis Cardinals' slick second-season righthander, has 20 victories fixed as his target at 24 years of age.

"You get off to a start like this and you've got to shoot for it," said the 6-foot-1 native of Swift Current, Sask., after stopping the Atlanta Braves 2-0 on two hits Thursday night.

Cleveland's triumph extended his victory string to seven since he was beaten 8-3 June 2 by the Los Angeles Dodgers' Tommy John.

His streak rivals that of Bob Gibson, who's won nine in a row since May 15, and his third shutout of the season matched the veteran Gibson's total.

Gibson has a 9-5 record as the Cards wrapped up the first half of their 156-game season, shortened by the player strike, and Cleveland is 11-4.

What's more Cleveland, who began the night with a 3.21 earned run average, is closing in on Gibson's 2.62 ERA. He was 12-12 his rookie season with an ERA of 4.01.

Clsveland, flashing a lively fast ball, permitted only Rico Carty's infield single leading off the second and a single by losing pitcher Ron Reed, 9-8, in the fourth.

"It was the only slider I hung all night," he said of the Reed blow to center field. Afterward only Mike Lum reached base for Atlanta on a walk.

"Keeping the ball down; I think that's the secret," said Cleveland, who delivered 93 pitches in his lowest-hit major league performance.

The only runs in the 1 hour and 33 minute contest were on a double by Matty Alou followed by Ted Simmons' single and Bernie Carbo's grounder in the fourth and on Cleveland's single in the seventh.

"I told myself all Reed could throw me was a slider," said Cleveland, who bounced a ground ball to the right side past second baseman Gil Garrido with Jose Cruz at third.

"I was looking for it, he threw it and I just hit it," the Cards pitcher said.

Reds Sweep Pirate Series

Editors: Because of a relatively light schedule, only one baseball roundup will be filed this morning

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pittsburgh manager Bill Virdon spent a week in Cincinnati Thursday night.

It no doubt seemed that way after the Reds beat his Pirates 2-0 and swept a three-game series of National League division leaders.

"The sweep was just one of those things," said Virdon. "You don't expect them ... but they happen sometimes in baseball."

It happened to the Pirates because they just weren't themselves. The normally heavy-hitting East leaders manufactured a paltry total of three runs in the series.

But the West-leading Reds had their usual proficiency at the plate, and also killed Pittsburgh with seven double plays in the series, including one Thursday night that helped Gary Nolan pick up his 13th victory of the year.

In the other National League games, the St. Louis Cardinals topped the Atlanta Braves 2-0 and the Houston Astros defeated the Chicago Cubs 7-2.

In American League action, the Minnesota Twins belted the Boston Red Sox 10-0; the Texas Rangers whipped the Cleveland Indians 5-0 and the Detroit Tigers turned back the Kansas City Royals 6-4.

Nolan allowed three Pittsburgh hits in the first two innings, but settled down to hold the Pirates off before Clay Carroll came in to pitch the ninth for Cincinnati.

"I simply ran out of gas," said Nolan.

The performance lowered his earned run average to 1.81, best among National League starters, as he became the league's first 13-game winner. He has lost only two times.

Cesar Gerinomo stroked three hits, including a home run in the fifth off Pittsburgh starter Steve Blaas. The Reds scored an insurance run in the eighth on Bobby Tolan's sacrifice fly.

Reggie Cleveland mastered Atlanta on two hits and drove in a run to pace St. Louis' victory. Cleveland won his 11th game in 15 decisions and enhanced his winning string to seven games.

Cleveland was reached for a single by Rico Carto starting Atlanta's second inning and touched for another base hit by opposing pitcher Ron Reed in the third.

Home runs by Tommy Helms and Norm Miller in the ninth inning produced five runs that broke a 2-2 tie and powered Houston past Chicago.

Helms first crashed a threerun shot off Cub ace Ferguson Jenkins, then Miller delivered a two-run job off reliever Dan McGinn.

Ray Corbin stopped the hot Boston Red Sox with a six-hitter and Rich Reese ripped a three-run homer and Eric Soderholm a two-run shot in Minnesota's romp.

It was only the fourth complete game pitched against Boston since May 29, a period covering 40 contests.

Standard Upsets Kingsway; NL's Jaycees, Kiwanis Triumph

MUSIAL LEAGUE

One teams's victory can easily develop into another team's nightmare, as seen Thursday night in the Musial League's only game. Sikeston Standard, cellar dweller in the Musial League East, put together a tie-breaking rally in the last inning to bump Kingsway Plaza out of a first place tie in the Musial League's Western Division race.

A leadoff double in the top of the last inning from the Standard's Roberts set up the winning run in the Printers 6-5 triumph over Kingsway Plaza. The win pushed the Standard's record to a 4-9 position, while Kingsway Plaza dropped to a 9-3 mark, one-half game below the West's new leader, Bank of Sikeston (9-2).

Malone and Hyde moved back withing two games of the Eastern division's top-running Collins Construction team in the evening's first game, collecting a 1-0 forfeit from Brothers Club, which failed to field a complete team.

Kingsway had jumped into a 1-0 lead in the first frame before the Printers started to work with a three-run second inning and a two -run third for a 5-2 lead. Kingsway started on the come back trail with one run in each of the last three innings, and left the tying and winning runners aboard before the Standard's blow retired to the side on three strikeouts and picked up the win in relief of starter Long.

McDonald, Long and Blow each had three hits in the Printers' 20-hit barrage, while Carmody, Moore, Rice, Roberts and Green followed with two safeties each.

Chappel suffered the loss for Kingsway and led his team with three hits.

AMERICAN LEAGUE — Jenkins and Caproco added victories to their records last night at Farris Field. Caproco jumped on a run-scoring merry-go-round with 20 runs in the last inning and humiliated, Flower Basket in a 31-1 first-game romp. The win kept the Caproco team close on the tail of Fabick, 9-1 full game ahead of Caproco in the Eastern Division race.

In the nightcap Ryan Jenkins put together a 17-run scoring offense and choked Ryan in a 17-9 contest for Jenkins sixth victory of the year.

Caproco sent 51 official batsmen to the plate,picked up 24 walks and pounded out 15 hits in the win over Flower Basket. Malcolm picked up the win from the mound and had three hits, to lead the Caproco unit at the plate.

Flower Basket's Scott Noel and Mattison paced the losers at the plate with two hits each, while Hardin was tagged with the loss.

Twelve runs in the first inning handed Jenkins all the runs needed in the 17-9 nightcap win over Ryan. Tidwell's four hits, along with winning pitcher Shaner's three socks backed Jenkins 15-hit attack. Wisdom picked up two of Ryan's four hits while Presley received the loss.

NATIONAL LEAGUE — Jaycees and Kiwanis, currently neck and neck in a battle for the top spot in the National League, both picked up wins Thursday night and boosted their records to 11-2 marks.

Jaycess notched Legion with a 5-1 loss in the first game as McCord checked Legion batters on a three -hitter. In the nightcap Kiwanis set back Lewis on a three hitter by Butler and posted a 6-4 victory.

Jaycees' lineup was good for six hits in the first game and scored one run in both the first and second innings to pick up the lead. Legion halted the shutout with one.

At the jungle's edge, new cities rise where lions once roamed. But in the deep jungle, the law of the wild still reigns supreme.

That law is best exemplified by the fierce Tirangi tribe, whose motto is "we will rule or die."

Refusing to abide by the jungle peace pact, this fierce group eventually goes on a rampage and attacks the peace-loving tribes.

As "Keeper of the Peace," it is The Phantom's duty to prevent an all-out jungle war. Will he succeed, or will the evil Tirangis bring back the days of barbarism and head hunters.

Flower Basket's Scott Noel and Mattison paced the losers at the plate with two hits each, while Hardin was tagged with the loss.

Twelve runs in the first inning handed Jenkins all the runs needed in the 17-9 nightcap win over Ryan. Tidwell's four hits, along with winning pitcher Shaner's three socks backed Jenkins 15-hit attack. Wisdom picked up two of Ryan's four hits while Presley received the loss.

NATIONAL LEAGUE — Jaycees and Kiwanis, currently neck and neck in a battle for the top spot in the National League, both picked up wins Thursday night and boosted their records to 11-2 marks.

Jaycess notched Legion with a 5-1 loss in the first game as McCord checked Legion batters on a three -hitter. In the nightcap Kiwanis set back Lewis on a three hitter by Butler and posted a 6-4 victory.

Jaycees' lineup was good for six hits in the first game and scored one run in both the first and second innings to pick up the lead. Legion halted the shutout with one.

Lewis's Mike DeWitt picked up two of his team's five hits as Kiwanis jumped into an early 5-1 lead in the second inning. Butler struckout 10 batters for the Kiwanis win.

That law is best exemplified by the fierce Tirangi tribe, whose motto is "we will rule or die."

Refusing to abide by the jungle peace pact, this fierce group eventually goes on a rampage and attacks the peace-loving tribes.

As "Keeper of the Peace," it is The Phantom's duty to prevent an all-out jungle war. Will he succeed, or will the evil Tirangis bring back the days of barbarism and head hunters.

Bishops Assigned; Frank To Arkansas

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — A newly elected black bishop was designated Thursday as head of the Kansas area of the United Methodist Church, and the longtime pastor of a Dallas church that is one of the largest in the denomination was nominated bishop of the Missouri area.

The assignments of Dr. Ernest Dixon to Topeka and Dr. Robert Goodrich to St. Louis were confirmed by the 366 delegates to the church's South Central Jurisdiction Conference, along with the terms of its six other bishops.

The assignment committee recommended the transfer of Dr. W. McFerrin Stowe from Topeka to become bishop of the Dallas-Fort Worth area, and Bishop Eugene Frank of St. Louis was designated for transfer to Little Rock as head of the Arkansas area.

Another newly elected bishop, Dr. Don C. Holter of Kansas City, was assigned to Lincoln as head of the Nebraska area.

Dr. Dixon, the new head of the Kansas area, is the first black bishop elected by the South Central Jurisdiction since its merger with the former Central Jurisdiction, a separate set-up for Negroes.

The South Central Jurisdiction includes clergy and laity delegates from Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Texas, Louisiana and Arkansas.

Dr. Dixon will fill a minority vacancy left by the Rev. Dr. Noah Moore, who will retire at the end of the conference here today.

He was born at San Antonio, Tex., 50 years ago. Since 1969 he has been an administrator of the General Program Council at the church's administrative headquarters in Dayton, Ohio.

Dr. Dixon is a graduate of Philander-Smith College at Little Rock and also holds degrees from Huston-Tillotson College at Austin, Tex., and Drew Theological Seminary at Madison, N.J. He and his wife have two sons and two daughters.

Dr. Goodrich, the new head of the Missouri area, has been minister of the First United Methodist Church in Dallas for 26 years. It has 6,000 members.

Dr. Goodrich is a native of Texas and is widely known for his radio and television programs, particularly the widely broadcast "Methodist Protestant Hour," and for his religious books.

He is 63 and has degrees from Birmingham-Southern College at Birmingham, Ala., Southern Methodist University at Dallas and Centenary College at Shreveport, La.

Dr. Frank is moving from St. Louis to Little Rock after the maximum of 12 years as bishop of the Missouri area. Until the election of Dr. Holter on Wednesday, Dr. Frank was the only Kansan among the bishops of the denomcnation. He was elected 16 years ago while serving as minister of First Methodist Church of Topeka.

Dr. Stowe is leaving Topeka after eight years. He was minister of St. Lukes Methodist Church in Oklahoma City when he was elected a bishop and assigned to the Kansas area.

Dr. Holter was born at Linc dn, Kan., 67 years ago, and since 1959 has been president of the St. Paul School of Theology Methodist in Kansas City. He and his family were held prisoner by the Japanese for three years in Manila, where Dr. Holter was president of Union Theological Seminary.

In Nebraska, Dr. Holter will replace the retiring Dr. Noah Moore, a black bishop elected by the former Central Jurisdiction before its integration.

Dr. Paul Milhouse was reassigned as Bishop of the Oklahoma area with headquarters in Oklahoma City.

The fourth new bishop elected by the jurisdiction, Dr. Finis Crutchfield of Tulsa, was assigned to the Louisiana area.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ground has been broken for a new museum, the Franklin Mint's Gallery of Great Americans.

Subjects for commemoration are chosen by the public, in 12 fields of endeavor, from a slate of nominees suggested by an advisory panel. Those elected each year become the subject of a commemorative medal series issued by the Franklin Mint, as well as historical exhibits in the gallery.

Harp Concert To Be Presented

Two pupils of Mimi Allen will present a duo harp concert Sunday at 10:30 a.m. in St. Paul Episcopal Church on North Main.

Linda Wilson, formerly of Springfield, studied under Miss Allen when she attended Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau. She now lives in Memphis where she is a first harpist with the Memphis symphony, director of music at Hutchison School for Girls and also director of harp at Memphis State University.

Marian Jackson of Hernando, Miss., studied under Miss Allen at Stephens College in Columbia. She graduated magna cum laude this year from Stephens and will go to Berlin, Germany, to study one year under a Fulbright scholarship in music, both harp and piano.

Miss Allen, a well known harpist, is the wife of Kenneth Smitten, a Sikeston businessman.

The Rev. Pipes Jones, vicar at St. Paul's, will conduct a brief service in addition to the rendition of sacred musical selections by the harpists.

Dalton Wins Praise For Religion Link

JEFFERSON CITY — Former Gov. John M. Dalton was praised Sunday as a man who was "determined to prove that religion and politics can go together -and he was successful."

The Rev. Jerry Bohn told a standing - room - only crowd at First Presbyterian Church he hoped Dalton's example as attorney general and governor would be followed by other committee Christians in politics.

Dalton died July 7 of cancer after a long illness at the age of 71, and was buried in his hometown of Kennett Monday.

Dalton's casket was draped with the flag that stood behind his desk when he was governor from 1960 - 64 and the minister read from the family bible that was used when Dalton was sworn in as attorney general in 1957 and as governor in 1960.

The Rev. Mr. Bohn said "his life really speaks for itself" as he praised Dalton's dedicated service to the church, his interest in youth and education and "the standards of right he set in government, following the motto 'nothing is politically right that is morally wrong."

That is one of the mottoes engraved in the rotunda of the state Capitol outside the governor's office.

The church was crowded with state officials past and present, Supreme Court judges, legislators, friends, former employes, political candidates and social leaders of Jefferson City who knew Dalton during his years as Supreme Court marshal, attorney general and governor.

INTERNATIONAL
SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
By Dr. William H. Taft

FOR JULY 16, 1972

Scripture: Psalms 103:1-5; 104;150

(Based on copyrighted outlines produced by the Division of Christian Education, National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., and used by permission.)

Praising The Lord

Worship at its highest is an expression of gratitude, appreciation, pure joy in, and adoration of the Creator. Worship is performed in many ways.

Our lesson today emphasizes the necessity to take time from our busy lives to sing and praise God. Our spiritual life is expanded in direct proportion to our ability to reach God.

For three weeks we will study expressions of devotion Next week we will focus on "Receiving God's Forgiveness" and the third lesson will discuss "Deepening Our Relationship with God."

In planning our worship of God there are several points to consider.

(1) The character of God. If we are to worship someone we must know his background, his teachings, and his promise to us.

(2) God the creator. Our Scripture reading today reveals how "God set the foundations of the earth, covered it with the sea, pushed up the mountains, and pressed down the valleys."

It is difficult to reach any conclusions about the creation of the universe that do not have some divine contributions.

(3) God the provider. Psalm 104 stresses this factor. This is one of the hymns of thanksgiving that relates Jehovah's care over all of His works. "God is the great Householder; both land and sea animals seek their meat from Him."

A study of His Psalms verse by verse will provide numerous reasons why we should worship God.

(4) God the redeemer. In Psalm 103 we read how God redeems our lives and how He forgives our sins. Here the emphasis on redemption by God in the Old Testament prepares us for the words of Jesus in the New Testament.

Many disagreements exist concerning the ideal way to offer our praise of the Lord.

Several years ago Look magazine reported on "The Underground Church," noting it developed because many persons were "fed up with the irrelevance of established religious ritual."

Today there are thousands of "underground" groups that meet regularly to worship. These include both Catholic and Protestant believers. Probably they are united in their opposition to the pressures that often surround the "organized" church and its formal ritual.

On the other hand a recent national survey revealed that religious people are "notably happier" than those who reject religion. The study included adults over 18.

Reinhold Niebuhr once wrote that the test of religious faith is whether it can help us face insecurity without despair and clarify the problems of our age.

If we follow Paul's advice to be kind to one another, we should not reject another person's means of worship as being inferior to our practices.

Some persons perfer to praise the Lord in quiet, private worship. Others may express their love with a trumpet or other musical instruments.

Time magazine last year reported about "The Gold Rush to Golgotha." The writer reviewed the conflicting attitudes toward the Broadway production of "Jesus Christ Superstar." The debate concerned one's views toward such a rock production.

The production was termed "a symptom and partial result of the current wave of spiritual fervor among the young known as the Jesus Revolution."

So we worship God in our own way, devising a method that offers a chance to praise Him and thank Him. Anyone who says "everything I have I have earned for myself" is out of communication with God.

Izaak Walton said "God has two dwellings: One in Heaven and the other in a meek and thankful heart."

The curved tail of the seahorse is used for holding on to narrow blades of turtle grass or seaweed, which they do most of the time.

Women in Church: Ellen G. White

By REV. DAVID POLING

Every national church assembly this year is nodding toward women's liberation. Major programs are getting overhauled. New recognition and larger assignments are being offered. The visibility and audibility of women in leadership is most apparent.

Yet history reveals that this is not the first decade to recognize the special talents and skills of women in the church. The late 1900s and early 20th century years saw some major personalities giving leadership within the Christian community and even establishing denominations.

No, we're not referring, this time to Mary Baker Eddy and Christian Science. Nor to Amy Semple McPherson and the Four Square Gospel Church. But the amazing, unique ministry of Ellen G. White and the founding, with her husband, of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church.

In the new book, "Ellen G. White, Prophet of Destiny," (Keats Publishing, Inc., $6.95) we have the most recent look at a woman who employed real gifts of prophecy to shape the lives of millions of people.

The clue to the success of this quiet, self-educated lady from Portland, Maine, is summed up in her own words:

> "At times I am carried far ahead into the future and shown what is to take place. Then again I am shown things as they have occurred in the past. Why have I not claimed to be a prophet? It is because in these days many who boldly claim that they are prophets are a reproach to the cause of Christ . . ."

Of course, an earlier group of Adventists (choosing Saturday as the Sabbath and rightful day of worship, not Sunday) made the most glaring gaff by predicting the end of the world for 1843—so asserted by William Miller. When that date came and went, they took a crack at 1845, but the vision was blurred.

Following this episode, Ellen White and her husband, James, ardent followers of Miller, began their own evangelistic outreach.

Ellen White was believed to have psychic powers and related some 2,000 visions to her followers. Much of this appeared in book form (although she was an able public speaker) where she penned some 37 volumes—writing until her death at 88!

Much that Mrs. White and her followers teach is not accepted by all Christians—and that is what makes for denominations and division. Yet many of her views—and visions—have a surprising relevance for today.

She taught that tobacco was a malignant poison. She questioned the use of X ray and held that overuse could be deadly.

Directing her people toward the benefits of nutrition and natural foods, she must have been one of the first to sound the alarm over consumption of fatty food and refined sugar.

Concerning urban life in 1890, she wrote with a cutting edge:

> "In the future the condition of things in the cities will grow more and more objectionable . . . from the standpoint of health, the smoke and dust of the cities are very objectionable. The constant liability to contact with disease, the prevalence of foul air, impure water, impure food are some of the many evils to be met."

Ellen G. White now has a global following and in the day when women's lib is rising in the church it might be helpful to see the trail carved out by individuals who were doing their thing a century ago.

The Rev. Mr. Massegee has designed his messages for the space age, with sections on the generation gap, technological advance, "the real caliber of man", youth of today and the modern day church.

Of the youth of today, he says, "There is more means for meanness today than ever before. However, I believe that the youth of our day have more potential for good than any generation in the history of the world. The youth of our day are "tops" in my book," he concludes. On the modern- day church, he said, "The church should be a hospital for sinners, not a social club for saints."

The Rev. Mr. Massegee has served three terms as president of the National Conference of Southern Baptist Evangelists and is in great demand nationally for his "Jesus Revolution" crusades.

The theme of his life and work — including every crusade he conducts is "Love, Joy and Peace."

Harp Concert To Be Presented

Two pupils of Mimi Allen will present a duo harp concert Sunday at 10:30 a.m. in St. Paul Episcopal Church on North Main.

Linda Wilson, formerly of Springfield, studied under Miss Allen when she attended Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau. She now lives in Memphis where she is a first harpist with the Memphis symphony, director of music at Hutchison School for Girls and also director of harp at Memphis State University.

Marian Jackson of Hernando, Miss., studied under Miss Allen at Stephens College in Columbia. She graduated magna cum laude this year from Stephens and will go to Berlin, Germany, to study one year under a Fulbright scholarship in music, both harp and piano.

Miss Allen, a well known harpist, is the wife of Kenneth Smitten, a Sikeston businessman.

The Rev. Pipes Jones, vicar at St. Paul's, will conduct a brief service in addition to the rendition of sacred musical selections by the harpists.

Dalton Wins Praise For Religion Link

JEFFERSON CITY — Former Gov. John M. Dalton was praised Sunday as a man who was "determined to prove that religion and politics can go together -and he was successful."

The Rev. Jerry Bohn told a standing - room - only crowd at First Presbyterian Church he hoped Dalton's example as attorney general and governor would be followed by other committee Christians in politics.

Dalton died July 7 of cancer after a long illness at the age of 71, and was buried in his hometown of Kennett Monday.

Dalton's casket was draped with the flag that stood behind his desk when he was governor from 1960 - 64 and the minister read from the family bible that was used when Dalton was sworn in as attorney general in 1957 and as governor in 1960.

The Rev. Mr. Bohn said "his life really speaks for itself" as he praised Dalton's dedicated service to the church, his interest in youth and education and "the standards of right he set in government, following the motto 'nothing is politically right that is morally wrong."

That is one of the mottoes engraved in the rotunda of the state Capitol outside the governor's office.

The church was crowded with state officials past and present, Supreme Court judges, legislators, friends, former employes, political candidates and social leaders of Jefferson City who knew Dalton during his years as Supreme Court marshal, attorney general and governor.

INTERNATIONAL
SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
By Dr. William H. Taft

FOR JULY 16, 1972

Scripture: Psalms 103:1-5; 104;150

(Based on copyrighted outlines produced by the Division of Christian Education, National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., and used by permission.)

Praising The Lord

Worship at its highest is an expression of gratitude, appreciation, pure joy in, and adoration of the Creator. Worship is performed in many ways.

Our lesson today emphasizes the necessity to take time from our busy lives to sing and praise God. Our spiritual life is expanded in direct proportion to our ability to reach God.

For three weeks we will study expressions of devotion Next week we will focus on "Receiving God's Forgiveness" and the third lesson will discuss "Deepening Our Relationship with God."

In planning our worship of God there are several points to consider.

(1) The character of God. If we are to worship someone we must know his background, his teachings, and his promise to us.

(2) God the creator. Our Scripture reading today reveals how "God set the foundations of the earth, covered it with the sea, pushed up the mountains, and pressed down the valleys."

It is difficult to reach any conclusions about the creation of the universe that do not have some divine contributions.

(3) God the provider. Psalm 104 stresses this factor. This is one of the hymns of thanksgiving that relates Jehovah's care over all of His works. "God is the great Householder; both land and sea animals seek their meat from Him."

A study of His Psalms verse by verse will provide numerous reasons why we should worship God.

(4) God the redeemer. In Psalm 103 we read how God redeems our lives and how He forgives our sins. Here the emphasis on redemption by God in the Old Testament prepares us for the words of Jesus in the New Testament.

Many disagreements exist concerning the ideal way to offer our praise of the Lord.

Several years ago Look magazine reported on "The Underground Church," noting it developed because many persons were "fed up with the irrelevance of established religious ritual."

Today there are thousands of "underground" groups that meet regularly to worship. These include both Catholic and Protestant believers. Probably they are united in their opposition to the pressures that often surround the "organized" church and its formal ritual.

On the other hand a recent national survey revealed that religious people are "notably happier" than those who reject religion. The study included adults over 18.

Reinhold Niebuhr once wrote that the test of religious faith is whether it can help us face insecurity without despair and clarify the problems of our age.

If we follow Paul's advice to be kind to one another, we should not reject another person's means of worship as being inferior to our practices.

Some persons perfer to praise the Lord in quiet, private worship. Others may express their love with a trumpet or other musical instruments.

Time magazine last year reported about "The Gold Rush to Golgotha." The writer reviewed the conflicting attitudes toward the Broadway production of "Jesus Christ Superstar." The debate concerned one's views toward such a rock production.

The production was termed "a symptom and partial result of the current wave of spiritual fervor among the young known as the Jesus Revolution."

So we worship God in our own way, devising a method that offers a chance to praise Him and thank Him. Anyone who says "everything I have I have earned for myself" is out of communication with God.

Izaak Walton said "God has two dwellings: One in Heaven and the other in a meek and thankful heart."

The curved tail of the seahorse is used for holding on to narrow blades of turtle grass or seaweed, which they do most of the time.

Women in Church: Ellen G. White

By REV. DAVID POLING

Every national church assembly this year is nodding toward women's liberation. Major programs are getting overhauled. New recognition and larger assignments are being offered. The visibility and audibility of women in leadership is most apparent.

Yet history reveals that this is not the first decade to recognize the special talents and skills of women in the church. The late 1900s and early 20th century years saw some major personalities giving leadership within the Christian community and even establishing denominations.

No, we're not referring, this time to Mary Baker Eddy and Christian Science. Nor to Amy Semple McPherson and the Four Square Gospel Church. But the amazing, unique ministry of Ellen G. White and the founding, with her husband, of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church.

In the new book, "Ellen G. White, Prophet of Destiny," (Keats Publishing, Inc., $6.95) we have the most recent look at a woman who employed real gifts of prophecy to shape the lives of millions of people.

The clue to the success of this quiet, self-educated lady from Portland, Maine, is summed up in her own words:

> "At times I am carried far ahead into the future and shown what is to take place. Then again I am shown things as they have occurred in the past. Why have I not claimed to be a prophet? It is because in these days many who boldly claim that they are prophets are a reproach to the cause of Christ . . ."

Of course, an earlier group of Adventists (choosing Saturday as the Sabbath and rightful day of worship, not Sunday) made the most glaring gaff by predicting the end of the world for 1843—so asserted by William Miller. When that date came and went, they took a crack at 1845, but the vision was blurred.

Following this episode, Ellen White and her husband, James, ardent followers of Miller, began their own evangelistic outreach.

Ellen White was believed to have psychic powers and related some 2,000 visions to her followers. Much of this appeared in book form (although she was an able public speaker) where she penned some 37 volumes—writing until her death at 88!

Much that Mrs. White and her followers teach is not accepted by all Christians—and that is what makes for denominations and division. Yet many of her views—and visions—have a surprising relevance for today.

She taught that tobacco was a malignant poison. She questioned the use of X ray and held that overuse could be deadly.

Directing her people toward the benefits of nutrition and natural foods, she must have been one of the first to sound the alarm over consumption of fatty food and refined sugar.

Concerning urban life in 1890, she wrote with a cutting edge:

> "In the future the condition of things in the cities will grow more and more objectionable . . . from the standpoint of health, the smoke and dust of the cities are very objectionable. The constant liability to contact with disease, the prevalence of foul air, impure water, impure food are some of the many evils to be met."

Ellen G. White now has a global following and in the day when women's lib is rising in the church it might be helpful to see the trail carved out by individuals who were doing their thing a century ago.

'Jesus Revolution' Revival At Charleston

The Rev. Mr. Massegee and team will deliver a message in word and song each evening at 7:30. The Rev. H. W. Chaney is pastor of the church.

The Rev. Mr. Massegee has designed his messages for the space age, with sections on the generation gap, technological advance, "the real caliber of man", youth of today and the modern day church.

Of the youth of today, he says, "There is more means for meanness today than ever before. However, I believe that the youth of our day have more potential for good than any generation in the history of the world. The youth of our day are "tops" in my book," he concludes. On the modern- day church, he said, "The church should be a hospital for sinners, not a social club for saints."

The Rev. Mr. Massegee has served three terms as president of the National Conference of Southern Baptist Evangelists and is in great demand nationally for his "Jesus Revolution" crusades.

The theme of his life and work — including every crusade he conducts is "Love, Joy and Peace."

His wife Beverly travels with him as part of the team and sings each evening. Mrs. Massegee is a former movie actress and supper club entertainer. She says, "My life has been radically changed by the Spirit of God. I am a new person. I've been revolutionized by the love of Jesus. Now all I want to do is serve Him."

Eagleton's Acceptance Speech

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Here is the text of Sen. Thomas Eagleton's acceptance speech before the Democratic National Convention:

May I ask a rhetorical question? Did I not give Roger Mudd a heck of a beating?

Escorting me to the platform this evening were four very distinguished Missourians who in a sense represent microcasm of my political life. Two of those were in politics when I began my political career. I have reference to Stuart Symington and to Lenore Sullivan, the distinguished congresswoman from St. Louis City. They were two of my heroes and they are now and they have done me great honor by participating in the ceremony.

Two others, Congressman Bill Clay and Governor Warren Hearnes and I began our political careers contemporaneously. I am deeply indebted to them, with special indebtedness to Governor Hearnes, for had he not carried Missouri in 1968 by over 400,000 votes, and had I not been able to cling to his coattails, I would not be here tonight.

And one other personal observation I address to the Alabama delegation. I think their act of generosity was the high point, and gracious courtesy, a most harmonious action which I gratefully received.

And one final personal note, one final personal note that will be understood only by members of my family and by no others, but this speech is dedicated to MDE.

Ladies and Gentlemen, this has been a year of surprises. Most of the delegates in this hall did not expect to be the political pros of 1972. Most of us did not expect to nominate a man who began with only five per cent in the polls. Few expected our convention to be orderly and so productive. And surely I had not expected to stand before you tonight as the Democratic nominee for vice president of the United States.

It is thus with deep humility in the face of the responsibility you have asked me to assume, and with profound gratitude to you, the delegates and, of course, to Senator McGovern, that I accept your nomination.

With God's help and with yourself I commit myself to the difficult task that lies ahead. I accept with confidence because I think all of the surprises of 1972 have shown us something very important about ourselves, about ourselves as Democrats, as Americans.

We are learning to live with some of those surprises. We are even learning to like some of them. We are learning to find opportunity in them, not just uncertainty and not just fear. We are learning the importance of bold vision, vision to provide the guidance denied us in these uncertain times, and I sense in this convention that to our surprise perhaps we are discovering in the threads of our diversity the very fabric of a strong united Democratic party.

As I look out across this vast and great hall I see the future of America building truly, truly this convention represents the best the grass roots of our nation can offer. As this convention has shown, we can meet under one roof, we can meet in peaceful discussion and we can work together to solve the problems of America.

And I ask of these fine delegates, isn't that enough to carry a new message of hope to the American people?

And isn't that enough to win in 1972?

My friends, America has been stalled for four long years. We have been stalled in a senseless war in Vietnam. We have been stalled economically here at home with millions and millions of Americans idled by needless unemployment. We have been stalled in the desperate fight to save our beleaguered cities. We have been stalled in providing adequate funding for our schools. We have been stalled in the effort to preserve our previous and vanishing environment. And we have been stalled in its deeply felt need to find a new direction, a new direction for its citizens.

From the people who promised to bring us together we have gotten deception and more distruct. From the people who promised the lift of a driving dream we have a sodden mound of trampled hopes, and so we have an electorate so jaded by gimmickry that their healthy skepticism about politics, indeed their healthy skepticism about politicians, has escalated into a total lack of confidence in this administration.

When George McGovern asked me to be the nominee of the Democratic party for vice president, he told me what he perceived the office of vice president to be. We knew it is the second highest office in the land and he wanted it to be filled by a person whose objectives are compatible with those of the president himself, but who will not hesitate to make his views known to the president.

And, most important, it is an office whose occupant must understand and appeal to the highest, not the basest motives of our fellow Americans.

Those were the terms of Sen. McGovern's fine offer and those were the terms which I accepted. No man in public life could ask for more and indeed no political party should accept less.

If there is one thing which the present occupant of the White House has made perfectly clear-it is that he does not share that view of the role of his vice president.

And so tonight I pledge to you that we will restore the dignity of the office of the vice presidency. It will not be a platform for cheap rhetorical attacks that divide our nation.

John Kennedy, whose brother will be with us momentarily, John Kennedy taught us to ask not what our country can do for us but what we can do for our country. And indeed what we have learned since then in one of the hard and bitter lessons of our time is that there are limits to which even a great and might nation can do.

For four years with cosmetic, diverse, and callous disregard for the intelligence and the conscience of our citizenry, Richard Nixon has tried to make us forget what our nation should do. And if we are to be true to our heritage, what our nation must do.

Ladies and gentlemen, George McGovern offers us the opportunity to return to the principles upon which America was founded, to ask what we can do for one another and together what we can do for our country and for mankind.

In Richard Nixon we have a President who has traveled to the far reaches of our globe, who tells us that his greatest thrill comes from sending Americans to distant places, but who has yet to study the mood and the spirit of his own countrymen.

We Democrats know that mood and we know that spirit. We know, ladies and gentlemen, that all is not well. We know that, but it is not because, as some would have us believe, that we Americans have lost our way. All we have lost is the leadership to show us the way.

With George McGovern we will have that leadership and let us join together then tonight and let us elect George McGovern president of the United States.

Let us work for Democrats at every office level, let us campaign in ever state and carry the message to every American, and let us so conduct ourselves and conduct our campaign and indeed let us conduct our lives that in later years men may say 1972 was the year not when America lost its way but the year when America found its conscience.

Thank you.

White House Novel

RAGLAND. By John Van Orsdell. World Publishing. $7.95.

Action, adventure, politics, crises in the White House, international diplomacy and espionage — the whole works — are wrapped up in this graphic novel.

The time is the near future. Jeffrey Ragland, a quiet and unobtrusive vice president, suddenly is thrown into the most powerful office in the world when the president has a heart attack. What will the new president be like?

There are plenty of crises. It appears the Red Chinese have succeeded in smuggling a nuclear device into the United States, perhaps as a means of blackmail. There is the threat of a nationwide strike. There is a sudden maneuver by the opposition political party to gain control of the Senate.

After remaining quiet at first, Ragland swings to life. There are secret summit meetings. He offers a legislative program — a controversial measure to strike at the roots of poverty, another for tax reform, another for urban rehabilitation. Ragland becomes a combination idealist and man of decision. Which upsets the whole Establishment.

The cast of characters is huge — fortunately there is a roster at the front of the book — including cabinet members, legislators, spies, military figures, a vitriolic columnist, a delegation of cosmonauts, and assorted Chinese, Russians and North Vietnamese of high rank.

In the grand climax Ragland risks his life to bring about a sensational coup in world affairs.

What's The Law?
Computer Shorts Out

By Jack Strauss, LL. B.

Pattie bought stock in the Wimple Company and shortly thereafter began to receive royalty checks like she had won the Irish Sweepstakes. Actually, it was all an error. The electronic brain that was employed by the Wimple Company to prepare and send out royalty checks to investors had suffered a mechanical stroke.

Pattie, however, never questioned the accuracy of her payments nor the generosity of the liberal computer. And she spent the money she received as quickly as the mailman could bring it.

Then, one day, the officials at the Wimple Company discovered the reliability gap of its computer and demanded that Pattie return all the money that had been erroneously paid to her.

"First off," responded Pattie, "I can't repay it because I spent it. And, secondly, I won't repay it because it was your electronic brain that made the mistake and not me."

"While the computer may have made the mistake," she was told, "you're the one who spent the money and not the computer. And, since it didn't belong to you, you've got to give it back."

Pattie, however, had no such intention and the matter ended up in court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you require Pattie to repay the moneyerroneously sent to her by the generous computer?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that, as a general rule, where money is paid under a honest mistake of fact, it may be recovered. Consequently, concluded the judge, the Wimple Company was entitled to the return of the overpayments made. (Based upon a 1958 Texas Court of Civil Appeals Decision)

VP Candidacy Climaxes
Eagleton's Meteoric Rise

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The selection of Thomas F. Eagleton as the Democratic vice presidential candidate climaxed a meteoric rise in politics for the 42-year-old junior senator from Missouri.

At 27, Eagleton was elected St. Louis County circuit attorney; at 31, Missouri's attorney general; at 35, lieutenant governor; and at 38 Missourians sent him to the U.S. Senate.

Youthful in appearance, Eagleton sometimes has been called a Kennedy-type Democrat, but he dislikes being labeled either a conservative or a liberal. He says his views depend on the issue involved. Associates regard him as liberal on most matters.

He called in 1968 for an immediate cease-fire in Vietnam, and was an early advocate of stopping the bombing there.

Eagleton also tried to whittle down military spending and succeeded in knocking out the MBT70 tank as a wasteful expense.

He advocated wage and price controls to slow inflation. When President Nixon announced Phase I of his economic controls, Eagleton praised the action but told Missourians he hoped it wasn't "too little, too late."

Eagleton has worked on labor and consumer issues in the Senate. He got the Senate to adopt a clear labeling act. He sponsored an amendment, later adopted, that allowed use of federal funds to ease the financial strain on school districts caused by public housing projects.

As vice chairman of the Senate's air and water pollution subcommittee, he has counted environmental problems as one of his main concerns in recent months.

Eagleton was a principal sponsor of the Clean Air Act of 1970 and was an author of the Water Pollution Act of 1971, which is still pending in a conference committee.

As chairman of the Senate committee on the District of Columbia, he pushed through a consumer protection act and got the Senate to adopt a home rule bill for the district.

As lieutenant governor of Missouri, Eagleton presided over the state Senate with a flair. Quick-witted, he often broke tensions with a quip. He served as cochairman of the Governor's Conference on Education and was head of the Governor's Commission on Crime and Juvenile Delinquency.

At 15, Eagleton was the target of a kidnaping threat while his father was representing the Missouri Senate in an ouster case against a senator accused of soliciting a bribe.

He later became an honor graduate of Amherst College and Harvard Law School and attended Oxford University.

Eagleton's Acceptance Speech

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Here is the text of Sen. Thomas Eagleton's acceptance speech before the Democratic National Convention:

May I ask a rhetorical question? Did I not give Roger Mudd a heck of a beating?

Escorting me to the platform this evening were four very distinguished Missourians who in a sense represent microcasm of my political life. Two of those were in politics when I began my political career. I have reference to Stuart Symington and to Lenore Sullivan, the distinguished congresswoman from St. Louis City. They were two of my heroes and they are now and they have done me great honor by participating in the ceremony.

Two others, Congressman Bill Clay and Governor Warren Hearnes and I began our political careers contemporaneously. I am deeply indebted to them, with special indebtedness to Governor Hearnes, for had he not carried Missouri in 1968 by over 400,000 votes, and had I not been able to cling to his coattails, I would not be here tonight.

And one other personal observation I address to the Alabama delegation. I think their act of generosity was the high point, and gracious courtesy, a most harmonious action which I gratefully received.

And one final personal note, one final personal note that will be understood only by members of my family and by no others, but this speech is dedicated to MDE.

Ladies and Gentlemen, this has been a year of surprises. Most of the delegates in this hall did not expect to be the political pros of 1972. Most of us did not expect to nominate a man who began with only five per cent in the polls. Few expected our convention to be orderly and so productive. And surely I had not expected to stand before you tonight as the Democratic nominee for vice president of the United States.

It is thus with deep humility in the face of the responsibility you have asked me to assume, and with profound gratitude to you, the delegates and, of course, to Senator McGovern, that I accept your nomination.

With God's help and with yourself I commit myself to the difficult task that lies ahead. I accept with confidence because I think all of the surprises of 1972 have shown us something very important about ourselves, about ourselves as Democrats, as Americans.

We are learning to live with some of those surprises. We are even learning to like some of them. We are learning to find opportunity in them, not just uncertainty and not just fear. We are learning the importance of bold vision, vision to provide the guidance denied us in these uncertain times, and I sense in this convention that to our surprise perhaps we are discovering in the threads of our diversity the very fabric of a strong united Democratic party.

As I look out across this vast and great hall I see the future of America building truly, truly this convention represents the best the grass roots of our nation can offer. As this convention has shown, we can meet under one roof, we can meet in peaceful discussion and we can work together to solve the problems of America.

And I ask of these fine delegates, isn't that enough to carry a new message of hope to the American people?

And isn't that enough to win in 1972?

My friends, America has been stalled for four long years. We have been stalled in a senseless war in Vietnam. We have been stalled economically here at home with millions and millions of Americans idled by needless unemployment. We have been stalled in the desperate fight to save our beleaguered cities. We have been stalled in providing adequate funding for our schools. We have been stalled in the effort to preserve our previous and vanishing environment. And we have been stalled in its deeply felt need to find a new direction, a new direction for its citizens.

From the people who promised to bring us together we have gotten deception and more distruct. From the people who promised the lift of a driving dream we have a sodden mound of trampled hopes, and so we have an electorate so jaded by gimmickry that their healthy skepticism about politics, indeed their healthy skepticism about politicians, has escalated into a total lack of confidence in this administration.

When George McGovern asked me to be the nominee of the Democratic party for vice president, he told me what he perceived the office of vice president to be. We knew it is the second highest office in the land and he wanted it to be filled by a person whose objectives are compatible with those of the president himself, but who will not hesitate to make his views known to the president.

And, most important, it is an office whose occupant must understand and appeal to the highest, not the basest motives of our fellow Americans.

Those were the terms of Sen. McGovern's fine offer and those were the terms which I accepted. No man in public life could ask for more and indeed no political party should accept less.

If there is one thing which the present occupant of the White House has made perfectly clear-it is that he does not share that view of the role of his vice president.

And so tonight I pledge to you that we will restore the dignity of the office of the vice presidency. It will not be a platform for cheap rhetorical attacks that divide our nation.

John Kennedy, whose brother will be with us momentarily, John Kennedy taught us to ask not what our country can do for us but what we can do for our country. And indeed what we have learned since then in one of the hard and bitter lessons of our time is that there are limits to which even a great and might nation can do.

For four years with cosmetic, diverse, and callous disregard for the intelligence and the conscience of our citizenry, Richard Nixon has tried to make us forget what our nation should do. And if we are to be true to our heritage, what our nation must do.

Ladies and gentlemen, George McGovern offers us the opportunity to return to the principles upon which America was founded, to ask what we can do for one another and together what we can do for our country and for mankind.

In Richard Nixon we have a President who has traveled to the far reaches of our globe, who tells us that his greatest thrill comes from sending Americans to distant places, but who has yet to study the mood and the spirit of his own countrymen.

We Democrats know that mood and we know that spirit. We know, ladies and gentlemen, that all is not well. We know that, but it is not because, as some would have us believe, that we Americans have lost our way. All we have lost is the leadership to show us the way.

With George McGovern we will have that leadership and let us join together then tonight and let us elect George McGovern president of the United States.

Let us work for Democrats at every office level, let us campaign in ever state and carry the message to every American, and let us so conduct ourselves and conduct our campaign and indeed let us conduct our lives that in later years men may say 1972 was the year not when America lost its way but the year when America found its conscience.

Thank you.

White House Novel

RAGLAND. By John Van Orsdell. World Publishing. $7.95.

Action, adventure, politics, crises in the White House, international diplomacy and espionage — the whole works — are wrapped up in this graphic novel.

The time is the near future. Jeffrey Ragland, a quiet and unobtrusive vice president, suddenly is thrown into the most powerful office in the world when the president has a heart attack. What will the new president be like?

There are plenty of crises. It appears the Red Chinese have succeeded in smuggling a nuclear device into the United States, perhaps as a means of blackmail. There is the threat of a nationwide strike. There is a sudden maneuver by the opposition political party to gain control of the Senate.

After remaining quiet at first, Ragland swings to life. There are secret summit meetings. He offers a legislative program — a controversial measure to strike at the roots of poverty, another for tax reform, another for urban rehabilitation. Ragland becomes a combination idealist and man of decision. Which upsets the whole Establishment.

The cast of characters is huge — fortunately there is a roster at the front of the book — including cabinet members, legislators, spies, military figures, a vitriolic columnist, a delegation of cosmonauts, and assorted Chinese, Russians and North Vietnamese of high rank.

In the grand climax Ragland risks his life to bring about a sensational coup in world affairs.

What's The Law?
Computer Shorts Out

By Jack Strauss, LL. B.

Pattie bought stock in the Wimple Company and shortly thereafter began to receive royalty checks like she had won the Irish Sweepstakes. Actually, it was all an error. The electronic brain that was employed by the Wimple Company to prepare and send out royalty checks to investors had suffered a mechanical stroke.

Pattie, however, never questioned the accuracy of her payments nor the generosity of the liberal computer. And she spent the money she received as quickly as the mailman could bring it.

Then, one day, the officials at the Wimple Company discovered the reliability gap of its computer and demanded that Pattie return all the money that had been erroneously paid to her.

"First off," responded Pattie, "I can't repay it because I spent it. And, secondly, I won't repay it because it was your electronic brain that made the mistake and not me."

"While the computer may have made the mistake," she was told, "you're the one who spent the money and not the computer. And, since it didn't belong to you, you've got to give it back."

Pattie, however, had no such intention and the matter ended up in court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you require Pattie to repay the moneyerroneously sent to her by the generous computer?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that, as a general rule, where money is paid under a honest mistake of fact, it may be recovered. Consequently, concluded the judge, the Wimple Company was entitled to the return of the overpayments made. (Based upon a 1958 Texas Court of Civil Appeals Decision)

VP Candidacy Climaxes
Eagleton's Meteoric Rise

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The selection of Thomas F. Eagleton as the Democratic vice presidential candidate climaxed a meteoric rise in politics for the 42-year-old junior senator from Missouri.

At 27, Eagleton was elected St. Louis County circuit attorney; at 31, Missouri's attorney general; at 35, lieutenant governor; and at 38 Missourians sent him to the U.S. Senate.

Youthful in appearance, Eagleton sometimes has been called a Kennedy-type Democrat, but he dislikes being labeled either a conservative or a liberal. He says his views depend on the issue involved. Associates regard him as liberal on most matters.

He called in 1968 for an immediate cease-fire in Vietnam, and was an early advocate of stopping the bombing there.

Eagleton also tried to whittle down military spending and succeeded in knocking out the MBT70 tank as a wasteful expense.

He advocated wage and price controls to slow inflation. When President Nixon announced Phase I of his economic controls, Eagleton praised the action but told Missourians he hoped it wasn't "too little, too late."

Eagleton has worked on labor and consumer issues in the Senate. He got the Senate to adopt a clear labeling act. He sponsored an amendment, later adopted, that allowed use of federal funds to ease the financial strain on school districts caused by public housing projects.

As vice chairman of the Senate's air and water pollution subcommittee, he has counted environmental problems as one of his main concerns in recent months.

Eagleton was a principal sponsor of the Clean Air Act of 1970 and was an author of the Water Pollution Act of 1971, which is still pending in a conference committee.

As chairman of the Senate committee on the District of Columbia, he pushed through a consumer protection act and got the Senate to adopt a home rule bill for the district.

As lieutenant governor of Missouri, Eagleton presided over the state Senate with a flair. Quick-witted, he often broke tensions with a quip. He served as cochairman of the Governor's Conference on Education and was head of the Governor's Commission on Crime and Juvenile Delinquency.

At 15, Eagleton was the target of a kidnaping threat while his father was representing the Missouri Senate in an ouster case against a senator accused of soliciting a bribe.

He later became an honor graduate of Amherst College and Harvard Law School and attended Oxford University.

challenger John Carpenter, both of Sikeston; Bill Ferrell of Sikeston and Stuart Stuckey of Benton, candidates for county assessor; Sheriff John Dennis and contender, Lynn Ingram, both of Sikeston; and Jim Moore, Johnny Wilson and Jim Robison, all of Sikeston and candidates for prosecuting attorney.

Also appearing were Lenzie Beck of Sikeston, speaking for Rep Bill Burlison of Cape Girardeau, candidate for reelection as 10th District representative to Congress; Jim Dowd of St. Louis speaking for his father Ed Dowd's candidacy for governor; and Blair Moran, 10th Distrcit coordinator for William S. (Bill) Morris of Kansas City, another candidate for governor.

After the speeches the group voted almost unanimously not to endorse anyone on the state and county level.

3rd-Party Race Not Ruled Out

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — His proposals rejected by the Democrats, Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace has not closed the door completely on another third-party campaign.

"I don't have any plans now politically except to go back to Alabama," Wallace said Thursday.

Asked if that ruled out another American Independent Party effort, the crippled governor replied: "As I said, I don't have any political plans at this time. That would include that, of course."

But, he added: "I don't say I won't ever have any."

Wallace chatted for more than an hour in his hotel suite with Alabama newsmen covering the Democratic National Convention, where the governor tried unsuccessfully to get the presidential nomination.

The convention also refused to write into the party platform Tuesday night such Wallace proposals as an end to busing to achieve school desegregation and a stronger military posture.

Third-party speculation intensified Wednesday when Wallace campaign manager Charles S. Snider told newsmen the prospects were "growing stronger and stronger every minute."

Wallace flys today to Birmingham for treatment at the Spain Rehabilitation Center. President Nixon has made available another Air Force hospital plane like the one which flew the stricken governor to Miami.

During Thursday's news conference, Wallace recalled the moment he was shot May 15. "I thought I was going to die," he said. He also remembered his conversation with doctors when he arrived at Holy Cross Hospital in Siver Spring, Md.

Jones Urges Caution On Phone Pricing

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Changes in the pricing of telephone service should be approached carefully, Marvin E. Jones, chairman of the state Public service Commission, said today.

He said there is wide discussion in the telephone industry of changing local service pricing from flat rates to charges based on usage, to more nearly reflect the cost of providing service.

"But careful consideration must be given to these ideas and others if we are to avoid throwing the system out of balance," he said.

"For example, if usage charges are imposed for local service, it is conceivable that customers might diminish their call frequency, and thereby drive the unit cost higher. This is entirely possible.

"Perhaps the best approach would be to initiate such pricing in a few test areas to determine the effects before permitting the implementation of these rates everywhere."

As telephone systems become more complex, he warned, improper tinkering with the framework could result in great damage to society.

Jones made his comments in a speech prepared for a Missouri Tele-Communications Association meeting.

Jones Urges Caution On Phone Pricing

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Changes in the pricing of telephone service should be approached carefully, Marvin E. Jones, chairman of the state Public service Commission, said today.

He said there is wide discussion in the telephone industry of changing local service pricing from flat rates to charges based on usage, to more nearly reflect the cost of providing service.

"But careful consideration must be given to these ideas and others if we are to avoid throwing the system out of balance," he said.

"For example, if usage charges are imposed for local service, it is conceivable that customers might diminish their call frequency, and thereby drive the unit cost higher. This is entirely possible.

"Perhaps the best approach would be to initiate such pricing in a few test areas to determine the effects before permitting the implementation of these rates everywhere."

As telephone systems become more complex, he warned, improper tinkering with the framework could result in great damage to society.

Jones made his comments in a speech prepared for a Missouri Tele-Communications Association meeting.
